PRISONERS FASTING

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 1,000 maximum security prisoners in federal penitentiaries from Dorchester, N.B. to the B.C. Penitentiary are taking part in a hunger strike today protesting government delays in implementing recommendations contained in a report on prison reform.

Solicitor-General Francis Fox, who says he needs more time to study the report, said the hunger strike will have no impact on his actions.

Flights Return Slowly

Times News Services

Resumption of air service in Canada was hindered today as air traffic controllers were slow to return to work at Toronto International Airport.

F. E. Dorey, regional superintendent for the ministry of transport, said in an interview today that airports across the country were operational and ready to resume service but that an insufficient number of controllers had returned to work at Toronto.

"The controllers are dragging in slowly but we are having difficulty in reaching them," he said.

Dorey said legislation passed by the Commons early this morning stipulated that the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association was obligated to call its members and tell them to go back to work.

An association official in Toronto said in an interview: "We are not telling our men not to return to work. It is up to the ministry to inform them that they should go back."

Michael de Wilde, public relations spokesman for Air Canada, said the Toronto air traffic control centre has jurisdiction over air traffic at all Ontario airports except for Thunder Bay and Ottawa. It controls all flights passing over the province.

The lateness in opening Toronto was effectively delaying the opening of other airports, he said.

An Air Canada spokesman in Montreal said staff and planes were ready to fly early this morning but clearance from the ministry of transport to resume flights was delayed because controllers were not back to work at Toronto.

Don Redden, steward of the Toronto branch of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, said that the union was not staging a slowdown in resumption of operations.

"He said it was the responsibility of the ministry of transport to advise individual controllers when their shifts were to begin.

"Our job is to advise members that the strike is over, but not when to return to work," he said. "We could not possibly know when they should return to work."

TENSE ULSTER VISIT

Bombings, Riots Welcome Queen

Times News Services

BELFAST — Queen Elizabeth, guarded by more than 32,000 armed men, stepped on Northern Ireland soil today and touched off bombings and protest riots by supporters of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, who vowed to make it "a day to remember."

Several thousand stone and bottle-throwing Roman Catholics battled with police and riot troops in downtown Belfast an hour after one bomb, blamed on the Protestant Ulster Defence Association, went off in the area, injuring six persons.

Police said another Catholic mob rampaged through an area a mile north of the city centre, overturning automobiles and battling with security forces.

"We don't want your goddamn queen," they chanted.

Earlier, a time bomb planted in a car exploded at Crossmaglen, 50 miles from Belfast, causing property damage in the town centre.

Meantime the Queen, dressed in emerald green with matching hat, strolled smiling amid 2,500 cheering and flower-waving subjects on the lawns of heavily-guarded Hillsborough Castle, eight miles from the Belfast riots.

The 51-year-old monarch looked tired and tense from her gruelling schedule of Silver Jubilee visits to all parts of the United Kingdom, but her smile broke through when groups of children rushed forward to present her with bunches of flowers. One small boy gave her a brown pot.

The Belfast blast was near the rallying point for about 3,000 Republican marchers who were heading toward it behind a banner proclaiming the royal visitor "Queen of Death."

Another banner, referring to the eight years of violence in the six counties, said "1969-77, 1,800 dead."

The illegal march was organized by the Provisional Sinn Fein, political wing of the Provisional Irish Republican Army, as a demonstration of "abhorrence and resentment" against the Queen's visit.

The visit is the Queen's first to Ulster since 1966 — three years before British troops were ordered into the province, torn by sectarian strife between majority Protestants loyal to the crown and minority Roman Catholics seeking union with the Irish Republic.

Clark Starts Legal Action Against Gov't

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Joe Clark announced Tuesday night that he has initiated steps to take the federal government to court to challenge the legalities of its participation in an international uranium price-fixing cartel.

Prime Minister Trudeau said earlier in the Commons he has asked advisers to review a 1976 cabinet order that the opposition feels restricts open debate — even the seeking of legal advice — on the operations of the cartel.

Clark issued a statement saying the Progressive Conservative party has retained Toronto lawyer John Sopinka as counsel "in respect of possible legal action arising from the government's involvement in the international uranium cartel."

The Conservatives, who have obtained documents from a U.S. court case about the cartel, say the operation may have violated Canadian anti-combines law and damaged Canadians because of higher prices for uranium.

MERCURY SOARS TO 3-YEAR HIGH

If you got a little hot around the collar Tuesday there was good reason — it was Victoria's hottest day in nearly three years.

The temperature tipped the scale at 29.3 degrees Celsius — 84.7 degrees Fahrenheit — at the airport and it was one degree cooler at Gonzales.

The last time it was hotter was on Aug. 28, 1974, when the temperature hit 32.1 degrees.

But Tuesday's scorcher was still no record. The warmest Aug. 9 was 34.4 degrees in 1960.

A spokesman for the Victoria weather office said today the five-day outlook calls for more sunny, warm weather with highs of 25 to 30 degrees and lows of 10 to 12 degrees.

No rain is in sight. The last measureable rainfall was July 16 when there were 2.6 millimeters.

Several parks in Greater Victoria have been closed and a bonfire scheduled for Friday's Silver Jubilee celebrations has been cancelled in Beacon Hill Park due to the extremely dry conditions.

Victoria city dropped its plan for a bonfire after a grass fire set to prepare the site for the bonfire almost went out of control. All other Silver Jubileee festivities will take place as planned.

The Capital Region District has closed North Hill Park, Bear Hill Park, Durrance Lake Park except for the lake itself, Mill Hill Park and East Sooke Park except for the beach area.

Victoria has closed Thetis Lake Park trails, leaving only the parking lot and main beach area opened to the public. Trails in Mount Douglas Park are also closed but all picnic areas near the beach are open.

Provincial parks remain open but a spokesman for the parks branch said fires are allowed only in designated areas with pits.

Saanich has also closed public access to several areas because of the high fire hazard. Affected areas include wooded areas of Ten Mile Point, a large portion of the Prospect Lake area and an area near Camosun College.

Delay 'Would Be Disastrous' In Rebuilding Razed Dock

City and provincial politicians were told today Victoria can rebuild its port facilities on the ashes of Monday night's massive fire at Ogden Point, but if any time is lost it will be a port only for "some oranges at Christmas time — and that would be disastrous."

The comment came from Hershell Smith, principal of Westcan Terminals, the firm of wharfingers which collected wharf revenue for Canadian National Railways in the large warehouse building destroyed in the fire.

At a special meeting called by Victoria Mayor Mike Young, Smith stressed the need for quick, firm decisions in redeveloping the dock area without time-wasting political hassles a on who does what and for how much.

He said it's essential that the companies using the Ogden Point facilities for shipment of pulp — a trade with present profits of about $500,000 a year and potential for 400,000 tons annually — be given an early indication of when they might resume usage.

Otherwise, he warned, the trade will go elsewhere, the area's economy would suffer even further and the jobs of longshoremen with a payroll of $3 million a year would be lost.

Smith said the razed warehouse had a total area of 140,000 square feet and a replacement of 200,000 square feet would cost about $2 million.

If speedy action is taken the structure could be completed by the end of November, he said.

Smith suggested the CNR be asked immediately if it intends replacing the warehouse. If not, there should be representations to the federal ministry of transport for the formation of a Victoria harbor commission similar to those in Port Alberni, Nanaimo and elsewhere.

Such a commission would be able to seek federal grants to finance rebuilding, and also apply for long-term capital loans for port development. Amounts as high as $30 mil-

JULY FERRY TRAFFIC UP 21% OVER 1976

July vehicle traffic on B.C. Ferries at two main crossings increased an average 21 per cent over last year, according to statistics released Tuesday.

The Tsawwassen to Swartz Bay run was up 23 per cent while the return crossing jumped 21 per cent.

Passenger traffic on the Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay route rose 18 per cent and the return trip 16 per cent.

Horsehoe Bay to Departure Bay traffic went up 20 per cent in both directions, while passenger traffic increased 18 per cent.

The statistics didn't provide comparisons with 1975 figures.

Ferry fares were doubled last year and then cut back 20 per cent early this year when vehicle and passenger traffic dropped drastically.

NEW YORK — Owners of the six World Hockey Association teams who Tuesday had their applications for entry into the National Hockey League rejected by the NHL board of governors were still in a state of shock today.

"They will regret this decision," said Harold Baldwin of the New England Whalers. "The decision was made by a small group of emotional men, not in the best interests of hockey. We're not going out of business. Now maybe we'll concentrate on getting aggresive."

"We thought we were doing the best thing for hockey," said Bill DeWitt Jr. of the Cincinnati Stingers. "Obviously, the NHL didn't."

Ed Snider, president of the Philadelphia Flyers of the NHL and one of the prime backers of an association with the WHA, said: "naturally I'm disappointed; I don't know what the vote was. It was a secret ballot."

It is believed seven NHL governors were against the merger.

Bob Graham, chairman of the board of the Winnipeg Jets, said: "We understand the governors didn't even vote on our applications. Naturally we are shocked. It was unexpected."

Some NHL governors feel the WHA could take legal action against them. However, the WHA officials would not say what they might do. (See story on page 16).

Another Secret Document On Kerster Bared by NDP

"The New Democratic Party Tuesday hit the Social Credit government with yet another secret document it claims bolsters opposition charges that MLA George Kerster (SC-Coquitlam) received preferential treatment from the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

The latest — revealed to the legislature's public accounts committee by Gary Lauk (NDP-Vancouver Centre) — is a memo written March 22, 1977, by Murray Rogan, manager for ICBC public inquiries, to Norman Bortnick, ICBC general manager.

The document is stamped confidential, and as far as Bortnick and Rogan know, the only copies are the original, Rogan's file copy and a copy forwarded to T. E. Holmes of the claims department. Bortnick said all copies would be kept in locked files.

The memo notes that the corporation has been asked to provide a written statement concerning the overdue fleet account of Surrey Dodge, Kerster's old firm.

In it, Rogan writes: "In view of the sensitive nature of previous operational matters involving Mr. Kerster, I would appreciate being advised as to how you wish the matter to be handled."

The memo also notes that the account is "shortly to receive legal attention due to the outstanding amount," and concludes: "I see no reason why this account should be treated differently, but in view of other altercations with Mr. Kerster, perhaps you have other thoughts."

Under tough questioning Rogan said he had made a "poor choice of words," and added that Kerster had been treated the same as any other citizen.

Bortnick explained the reference to legal action, noting that all overdue accounts are eventually referred to the ICBC legal department for action.

Rogan insisted that he felt that the account should not be handled any differently than all the others.

"It was just a figure of speech, and certainly did not imply that special treatment had been requested," he said.

To questions by Kerster, he

Ottawa Deficit Soars

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's budgetary deficit for the 1976-77 fiscal year which ended last March 31, totalled $6.301 billion, a growth of more than 50 per cent from the previous year, preliminary estimates released Tuesday by the finance department show.

The deficit was accounted for by spending of $38.941 billion and revenues of $32.640 billion. In the previous fiscal year, the deficit was $4.022 billion.

Financial requirements of the government, excluding foreign exchange transactions, totalled $5.394 billion, compared with estimated requirements of $5.350 billion in the March 31 budget.

The government figures showed the largest single component of revenues was personal income tax, which totalled $14.620 billion. Corporation income tax totalled $5.377 billion, sales tax revenue was $3.929 billion and customs import duties were valued at $2.097 billion.

Non-tax revenues, including such income as return on government investments, Bank of Canada income and post office revenues totalled $3.485 billion.

Major expenditures by the government in the 1976-77 fiscal year included $4.673 billion in payments on the government debt; $3.113 billion in fiscal transfer payments to the provinces; $4.437 billion in old-age security; $1.979 billion in family allowances.

The Canadian dollar, meanwhile, continued to drift downward in early trading on New York money markets today.

At noon, it was valued at 92⅝ U.S. cents," fractionally below the level it closed at Tuesday.

At one point, the Canadian dollar went as low as 92.67 U.S. cents, its lowest level since November 1969.

All-Out Effort to Save Dying Whale

Bob Wright of Sealand has been granted an emergency permit by the federal government to capture and treat a dying baby killer whale at Menzies Bay, 15 miles north of Campbell River.

Wright and a team of marine biologists were at the site Tuesday night enclosing the whale within a long net and trying to get it to eat.

The whale is believed to be about one year old. Normally baby whales take milk from their mother until they are 18 months old.

Wright is trying to get the whale to eat fish on a regular basis to build up its strength. If the whale becomes strong enough, it would be taken to Sealand for treatment.

Bern Hawley of the department of fisheries in Vancouver issued the permit Tuesday at the instructions of Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc.

"This is an emergency situation," Hawley said. "We understand the whale may die within a few weeks unless some action is taken."

Permits are no longer granted to capture killer whales except in emergency or special circumstances.

Dr. Michael Bigg of the fisheries biological station in Nanaimo has maintained a close watch on the whale since a resident of Menzies Bay reported it to him.

The whale is swimming in about 10 feet of water and not moving far.

At the instructions of Bigg, the resident, tried to feed the whale on the weekend and with some success.

"He goes out in a rowboat and taps against the side of the boat," Bigg said.

"When the whale hears the sound it swims over and eats some of the fish. This is the first recorded time anyone has fed a killer whale in the wild. This is very unusual."

Bigg said it appears the baby has become separated from its mother and is not certain how to survive on its own.

"This is an orphan whale and it is starving to death. Only a very lucky chance will save it."

Bigg said the whale is covered with sores, gashes and brown algae.

The algae growth indicates the whale is lying for extended periods in shallow water almost motionless, which is very unusual whale behavior but could be the result of being weak from hunger.

JUBILEE DAY LINEUP CHANGE

A torchlight parade and fireworks will climax Friday's jubilee day celebrations in a revised schedule released today.

First event will be a combined flypast and naval manoeuvre by units from CFB Comox and CFB Esquimalt at noon.

At 2 p.m. a military parade will begin from Beacon Hill Park, proceeding past a reviewing stand at the Empress and then through downtown.

At 7:30 p.m. there will be a black powder and rifle salute by members of the Malahat Marauders at Beacon Hill Park.

A Jubilee carillon concert will begin at Museum Square at 7:30 p.m.

The sunset ceremony will begin at 8 p.m. on the legislature lawn, featuring cadets from HMCS Quadra, followed by a parade to Beacon Hill park.

At 8.30 p.m. Jock Dunbar's Jubilee Show will be held on a special stage set up on Beacon Hill Park's Finlayson Point, immediately below Beacon Hill Park lookout.

The torchlight parade by the Victoria fire department will begin at 9:30 p.m. on Dallas Road.

The fireworks display concludes the program at 10 p.m.

Quick Decisions Urged on Ogden Point

lion have been made available to other commissions, he said.

Victoria Ald. Frank Carson, chairman of the city's commercial and industrial development committee, joined Smith in proposing an early commitment of funds for rebuilding the dock facilities so that the pulp trade will not be jeopardized.

"Time is essential," Carson said. "What is needed immediately while the details are being cleared up is someone to guarantee a bank loan of $2 million to see that the show is maintained."

But Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, the only provincial cabinet representative present, was obviously unwilling to commit the province to anything other than the general resolve to see that Victoria continues as a port.

Bawlf said a meeting has been tentatively set for Aug 18 so that federal, provincial, business and labor representatives can have a full day's discussion on the future of Ogden Point.

One of the main objects of the meeting will be to find out what the federal government's attitude is toward reconstruction of the damaged facilities, he said.

The minister appeared to contradict himself during the meeting. He initially expressed the opinion that the "federal government in not likely to consider reconstruction of the shed any more than CNR," but later emphasized that he has had no real indication of Ottawa's thinking on the matter.
End Lede

Meanwhile, as the loss figure, climbed past the $3 million mark, at least one major user of the dock is anxious to have the warehouse facilities rebuilt.

Jim Bogyo, director of corporate relations for Rayonier Canada Ltd., said his company finds the Victoria dock the most convenient terminal for exporting to foreign customers.

"We're anxious that it be rebuilt as fast as possible or at least that an alternative facility be provided," he said.

Rayonier Canada lost 4,500 tons of baled kraft pulp valued at more than $1.5 million. The Rayonier mill in Port Angeles, Wash., also used the Victoria terminal for shipping.

The U.S. mill lost 2,300 tons of baled specialty pulp valued in excess of $1 million, Port Angeles production superintendent John Swingle told the Times.

The $2.5 million pulp loss combined with the loss of the warehouse and equipment make the fire the most costly in dollar terms in Victoria's history.

A damage estimate on the loss of the building itself is not available. The dock, which is rock-filled concrete surfaced with blacktop, is relatively damage-free.

Rayonier's mills which used the Victoria terminal all have alternative shipping ports — Woodfibre also uses Vancouver, and Port Angeles ships from Seattle and Tacoma, but the Victoria port is convenient, representatives of both companies said.

Canadian National Railways owned the warehouse through an agreement with the federal ministry of transport.

Stuart Spencer, assistant to CNR vice-president Charles Armstrong, said today in Edmonton CN has made no decision at this time whether to rebuild the warehouse.

The question of the entire facility is currently under discussion with the federal government, he said.

As an existing facility, the warehouse operation was a profitable enterprise, he said, but said the question of whether it would be profitable after taking into account the cost of rebuilding is less certain.

A lot depends on the extent of the insurance coverage and whether there is demand from the users of the warehouse, he added.

Westcan Terminals, which is the principal lessee from CNR, says a shed is needed. Pulp companies would not allow pulp to be stored under plastic sheets, Westcan's Smith said.

The fire has already begun to affect the full-time employment of some 140-150 longshoremen.

Stan Ball, president of the Victoria local of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union said a shipment of pulp would have been handled Tuesday.

There are four facilities which keep the longshoremen working full time — two terminals in Cowichan, the lumber dock at Ogden Point and the destroyed pulp terminal.

The fire has taken away one quarter of the longshoremen's work and will affect the full-time employment of all the men, Ball said.

Meeting Date on Plan Switched to Sept. 7

The controversial Aug. 22 date for Saanich's public hearing on its official community plan has been changed to Sept. 7.

Mayor Ed Lum said today Ald. Fred Severson, chairman of the lands, planning and housing committee, had discussed the matter with him at length.

Lum said the postponement has been made because "several aldermen weren't happy. They wanted everyone back from holidays."

He added, "the business of the municipality, however, can't wait for one alderman." (Ald. Robert Cameron is on vacation.)

The mayor said in order to get the final hearing on the plan completed before the end of the current year, it will now be necessary to hold additional special council meetings.

Lum said he doubts it will be possible to have a full council at the delayed public hearing and special council meetings.

Earlier in the day, Severson held a press conference to explain why he considered the Aug. 22 date was necessary.

He said every member of council had agreed to the plan and the original scheduling of the plan's development in which the public hearing had been set for May 16.

If the hearing was held Aug. 22, he added, three readings of the bylaw could be held at the Sept. 5 council meeting and the final reading at the Oct. 31 council meeting.

The time lapse between the last two meetings, he said, is necessary to get the required approval of the plan by the Capital Regional District and the provincial government.

Severson said four public meetings have already been held on the plan and the plan amended to meet the 188 items the public had wanted changed.

"As a responsible chairman of lands, planning and housing, I feel we should carry on. However, I'll confer with the mayor," he said.

At a committee meeting earlier Tuesday, Ald. John Mika had asked Severson to consider postponing the hearing until after the Sept. 12 public hearing on the Royal Oak industrial park rezoning.

At the press conference, Laurenson and municipal officials explained the outcome of the hearing on the official community plan will have no effect on the Sept. 12 decision. Severson noted the regional plan calls for the area to be developed as an industrial park.

58% BACK CONTROLS

TORONTO (CP) — A Gallup Poll says support for the government's wage and price control policy has climbed back to 58 per cent.

The figure, released Wednesday, is the same as the high point recorded in April last year, before support for the anti-inflation policy began to decline reaching a low point of 44 per cent last fall.

ANOTHER SECRET MEMO

stated that he had not been threatened or offered any inducements in the matter of Surrey Dodge, that there had been nothing unusual in the processing of the claim and that no special treatment or attention had been requested.

Lauk insisted that although the memo in question dealt specifically with the dispute over non-payment of portions of Surrey Dodge's fleet insurance premiums, the language used convinced him that Kerster had been applying pressure on ICBC.

He said the very fact that Rogan had written "I see no reason why this account should be treated differently" indicated that Kerster must have asked for preferential treatment.

"Otherwise, why say that he shouldn't be treated any differently?" he asked.

Lauk also suggested that use of the word "altercation" indicated trouble with Kerster.

On three occasions during his sworn testimony, Rogan was warned by committee chairman Dave Stupich (NDP-Nanaimo) that his statements appeared to be in conflict with his confidential memo to Bortnick.

On the fourth occasion, Stupich said that the "witness is being less than frank in his answers." He reiterated the statement at the end of the hearing, but apologized if it had been interpreted to mean that Rogan had lied.

The public inquiries manager disagreed with earlier testimony by Derek Vettes, supervisor of the Surrey Claims Centre at the time the claim was paid, who suggested that Kerster was in a conflict-of-interest situation when he started inquiries about Surrey Dodge.

Rogan said that Kerster is his MLA, and therefore knew of his involvement with Surrey Dodge when the matter came up.

In his testimony, Vettes recalled his sole telephone conversation with Kerster about the Surrey Dodge claim which he had denied.

He said Kerster stated the claim "should be paid."

The conversation was "heated initially, and I suggested we could not continue the discussion until he was prepared to speak rationally. He was somewhat upset, then became amiable."

Vettes said he informed the MLA the date for the claim would expire within one week, and suggested he call the following Monday. Kerster did not call him before he was transferred to another office on July 1.

The ICBC employee said that while he had not seen the Surrey Dodge file since June 18, 1976, he could find no reason for his denial of the claim to be overturned.

Saanich Eyes Grants For Land

Saanich council will decide Monday whether to use Municipal Incentive Grants to boost the municipality's badly depleted land acquisition fund.

Comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton told the finance committee Tuesday the fund is so low that some recent major land acquisitions "have had to go to a 10-year mortgage situation."

Broughton said using the provincial government grants for new parks or park extensions made necessary by increased housing development could be considered a legitimate purpose.

Chairman Ald. Ian Cass said Saanich has $135,200 in such grants and will soon receive an additional $310,000.

The committee recommended on Broughton's advice, that all or the major part of the grants be earmarked for land acquisition.

Victoria and Sooke anglers forced to compete in the recent B.C. Salmon Derby with a 10-pound handicap were unfairly discriminated against, Lyle Kahl (SC — Esquimalt) told the legislature on Tuesday.

Kahl called on Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair to investigate after noting a Victoria resident failed to win the $25,000 first-prize although he caught the biggest fish.

Karl Emde of Delta won the four-weekend derby that ended Sunday with a 37-pound, eight-ounce spring.

Clay Corner of Victoria came second with a 43-pound eight-ounce catch.

"That's a rip-off," said Kahl.

The derby handicaps certain areas around southern Vancouver Island because the Sooke-Becher Bay-Pedder Bay waters consistently turn up springs that dwarf the salmon caught in other derby waters along the coast.

"I think that's a damned discriminatory practice," said Kahl.

But Mair thought the handicap a legitimate technique being used to make the derby more competitive — as handicaps are sometimes employed in golf and horse racing.

"The fact is that on beautiful southern Vancouver Island we are blessed with the largest fish in the area," said the minister.

"There would be no contest without the handicap. Only people from Sooke would enter."

Outside the legislature Kahl said he isn't sure whether he bought Mair's answer.

"I may pursue this further," he said. "It's not a frivilous matter when you're a fisherman — especially when there's $25,000 in prize money at stake."

Opposition members also leapt into the issue, but only to complain that it was a matter that didn't warrant the attention of the House.

Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) and Graham Lea (NDP—Prince George) complained that Kahl was wasting time.

Kahl's question and Mair's reply had taken about three minutes.

2,000 STILL SEEKING JOBS

With only four weeks until the fall school session, more than 2,000 students in Greater Victoria are still seeking work, says Randy Wittchen, officer-in-charge of the Student Manpower Centre.

He reports just over 1,250 students have been helped by the centre, "but there are a lot more students who need work."

Wittchen suggests anybody with work to be done — either firms or householders — phone the centre at 388-3458.

Pregnancy Saccharin Warning

OTTAWA (CP) — Pregnant or breastfeeding women should not consume saccharin or products containing saccharin, an independent expert committee set up by the federal health department recommended Tuesday.

The committee, set up in March after the federal ban on the sugar substitute was imposed because tests on laboratory animals linked saccharin to cancer, also recommended that the government allow the artificial sweetener in minimal quantities in irreplacable prescription drugs.

These drugs would have to taste so bad without saccharin that no patient would take them, the committee said.

"The only types of drug formulation likely to meet these requirements are those taken in liquid form or as chewable tablets," the health department said in a news release.

The committee also recommended the government gradually eliminate the use of saccharin in mouthwashes and toothpaste by Dec. 31, 1978, a year earlier than originally planned.

More Enemies' Lists, B.C. Conservative Says

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A Progressive Conservative MP said Tuesday he has conclusive proof that the federal government is compiling more "enemies lists" of public servants and others it considers to be poor security risks.

Frank Oberle was commenting on a Toronto Globe and Mail report, in which Robin Bourne, head of the Solicitor-General's departmental intelligence group, is quoted as saying risks are being kept of groups that don't involve federal public servants.

Bourne named the left-wing National Farmers' Union, The Alberta Indian Association and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, which includes municipal and provincial public servants.

Bourne said the federal cabinet is compiling the lists because certain members of these groups are considered poor security risks or because some organizations are "violence-prone."

Oberle, who has been prominent in opposition criticism of a previous such list, the so-called Extra-Parliamentary Opposition that has resulted in several lawsuits against the government by persons named in the list, said Tuesday that "certain law-enforcement agencies, including the security forces in the RCMP . . . are being used as political tools", by Prime Minster Trudeau.

The British Columbia Tory said he had names of public servants and other individuals on the new lists, but he refused to provide the names without getting the individuals' permission.

"I'm hoping the government will release them," he said, a shrug expressing his obvious disbelief that the government is prepared to take such a step because of possible further legal action.

"Definitely!" he replied when asked whether he feared a deliberate government campaign of suppressing basic political freedoms. "There's no question about that."

He said the government is using one particular section of the Federal Courts Act, which stipulates that even the most senior judges in the country cannot be allowed access to government documents that could be considered injurious to, among other things, the federal cabinet, federal-provincial relations and national security.

"The cabinet has set itself up as the judge, the jury and the executioner," he said, warning that if the situation is allowed to continue, this country could very easily become "The People's Republic of Canada."

Oberle, who said he would consider contacting the people named on the new "enemies" lists and releasing the names with their permission, said he has been visited by senior officers of the RCMP and the Ontario Provincial Police.

LONG TRAIN TRIP FOR THE TRUDEAUS

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minster Trudeau set out Tuesday night on a week-long, cross-country tour by private rail car with his three children.

As Parliament was debating a bill ordering the country's air traffic controllers back to work, the car was attached to the westbound CN Super Continental. The trip is to include stopovers in national parks along the route, ending in Prince Rupert.

A spokesman said the prime minister had been planning the trip for some time but decided to leave late Tuesday only after he was assured the back-to-work bill would be passed.

OPPOSITION DEMANDS NEW BUDGET, JOBS

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs blasted the government's handling of the economy and demanded a new budget Tuesday in the wake of statistics showing a sharp rise in July jobless rates.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he was concerned that the number of unemployed Canadians rose by 64,000 to 878,000 during July, but the March 31 budget measures need more time to have an effect.

The unemployment rate in July rose to 8.1 per cent of the work force from eight per cent in June and was one of the highest July rates on record.

As the Commons question period opened, Opposition Leader Joe Clark demanded that the government bring in incentives for private industry to expand their operations.

Later, he released a statement outlining a package of measures that the Progressive Conservatives favor, including income tax cuts for low-and-middle income earners totalling about $250 million.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, charged that high unemployment is contributing to national disunity and urged new direct job creation programs.

The number of jobless rose by 21,000 in Quebec during July, and the unemployment rate there was 10.3 per cent.

Since U.S. President Carter took office last November, unemployment there has declined and in June the U.S. jobless rate was only 6.9 per cent, Broadbent said.

Trudeau claimed Broadbent was being deliberately misleading because the U.S. jobless picture for years was worse than in Canada.

It is only since the U.S. government changed and new economic policies were introduced that the improvement has occurred, Trudeau said.

"We're calling for the same thing in this country," Broadbent shot back.

Broadbent estimated that the federal bill for unemployment insurance payments this year will reach $3.8 billion.

The money would be better spent on job creation programs than in giving the unemployed handouts, he said.

What the Voters Want

Give Saanich Mayor Ed Lum full credit for candor and forthrightness. In these times when development is a word only slightly less impugned than rape and murder, Lum is saying in no uncertain terms that he will seek re-election as mayor on a pro-development platform. He was quoted recently as saying that he had decided to run again, despite business pressures, because he wants to see the completion of various Saanich projects (for projects, read developments) he has been working on for years and because other members of council seem these days to be "anti-development."

Lum is quite firm in his belief that Saanich must develop a diversified tax base and not remain merely a bedroom community of Victoria. A tax base composed almost exclusively of residential properties will be too small to support the necessary municipal services without oppressively high taxes, he argues.

With these candid statements of his views, Lum should have set the stage for a November election to find out just where Saanich voters really stand — with Lum or against his pro-development stand. In past months Saanich has had the most controversy of any of the four core municipalities, and nearly all of it has focussed on development issues.

In almost every case, Lum and some pro-development aldermen have lined up against residents of various neighborhoods (backed by anti-development aldermen) on the questions of development for those neighborhoods.

Examples abound. The Royal Oak Ratepayers' Association has led a furious fight to keep a light industrial park out of their area — a park Lum says is essential to improve Saanich's economy and tax base. Residents of Broadmead are launching an all-out war against a 400,000-square-foot shopping centre proposed for their neighborhood. People living in Cadboro Bay are unhappy about plans for a major apartment development on Minnie Mountain in that area. And up on north Quadra, people aren't happy even about building single-family dwellings on land now classified as rural.

Opponents of development argue that these battles (none of which is yet won or lost) form a pattern — a pattern that shows that Saanich residents are taking an increasingly dim view of development. Lum and his supporters reply that the battlers are only a vocal minority and that the vast silent majority of Saanich residents would much rather have lower taxes than the vague intangible niceties of being only a suburban dormitory.

It is, of course, not possible to prove either claim. But the best possible proof would come in the result of an election in which Lum ran against a candidate whose views against development were equally clear and strong.

It now is up to the anti-development factions in Saanich to find a strong, credible candidate to carry their banner into the November election fight. If they do not, they will have no one but themselves to blame if the pro-development forces win an easy victory, then continue to try to move commercial and industrial enterprises into Saanich's residential areas.

She'll Live Forever

Ma Murray was 90 the other day, and we missed the shindig friends and relatives threw in Lillooet for the native of Windy Ridge, Kansas. But a belated Happy Birthday and many more for a newspaperwoman who can still make a logger blush with her vitriol and brimstone.

Mrs. Murray's credo as an editor has never been put down on paper but she would probably subscribe to the statement of aims of a Chicago publisher of the 1860s: "It is a newspaper's duty to print the facts and raise hell."

The papers she edited or helped to put out — often as reporter, typesetter, advertising salesman, press operator and printer's devil all together — may have been small in circulation but thanks to her persistent badgering of politicians, public figures and most every institution short of the papacy and a writing style not even a mustanger could tame, their influence went far beyond their circulations. She made sure of that. Damshur.

In a time when the craft of newspapering is filling up with computers, whippersnappers with "J-school" degrees and air-conditioned fluorescent-lit word factories it's comforting to know Ma Murray still carries on crusading.

You'll live forever, Ma, as the patron saint of ink-stained wretches everywhere.

Ha!

Farmers, land surveyors and others professionally concerned with metrification of measurement who must learn to work with metres, kilometres and so on may take satisfaction from the fact that the abbreviation for hectare, the new unit of land replacing the acre, is ha.

May we be excused for adopting the abbreviation as the best comment yet on the whole process of changing over from a perfectly good system based on three barleycorns to the inch and the length of an English sovereign's extremities to one based on concentric multiplications of the number 10?

A Government Making Profits

LONDON — Something funny has happened to socialism this summer: most of the big, nationalized British industries are making profits.

Not just profits, but, in some cases, obscene profits.

The embarrassment of riches has already brought about a rebate of $12 on everyone's telephone bill and a price freeze on natural gas.

Imagine, if a Canadian could do so, two postal deliveries a day and a profit.

And yet Britons continually complain about the service. It is expensive: a first class letter costs about 16 cents. But at that price you can expect — and get — next-day delivery. The post office is a true conglomerate, consisting of telephones and telegrams as well as letter service.

The whole operation made a profit of more than $700 million of which about $180 million is being returned to telephone subscribers.

Britons who froze during the energy crisis and a miners' strike are now astonished to discover that the electricity board has made a profit of $370 million.

British Gas made almost $60 million. The Coal Board topped $50 million.

Conglomerate

The syndrome is not merely attributed to high energy prices — although they have risen sharply since the early seventies.

Incredible as it may seem, British Airways has just soared to a $60 million profit. The authority which operates the national airports is also flying high at $30 million.

Who knows, there is even hope for British Rail, the consistent loser which has made a profit only five out of the 29 years of its existence, and has rapidly escalating fares to prove it.

The other bad loser and odd industry out in this year's boom in socialism is steel. It's not just an anomaly but a disaster, having lost about $175 million in the last year and now losing at a rate said to be more than a million dollars a day.

Overall, the Labor government might be expected to be smiling at this apparent proof that socialism works. However, it is being extremely cautious, and with good reason, in its reaction.

"You could put it down to efficiency," said a high government official. But it was obvious he didn't.

The good news, in most cases, was accompanied by warnings that the profit line could easily be broken.

While the post office was bragging that 93 percent of first class letters were delivered the day after posting, domestic letter volume fell by 4.3 percent; people, distrusting the system, simply wrote fewer letters.

And, at the same time, the post office got rid of 3,000 employees, mostly by attrition.

Productivity in the coal mines, despite the profits, declined between four and five per cent during the past year.

To ensure that energy does not become

LONDON
. . . UK crown agencies profitable

too profitable, the government has announced plans for a new billion-dollar coal-fired electricity plant in Yorkshire and wants to burrow through the beautiful Vale of Belvoir in Leicestershire to develop new coal mines.

Although the telephone division of the post office claims its waiting list is a record low since the end of the Second World War, there are still 38,000 people who are disconnected on it and the quality of service is generally recognized as second only to the Soviet Union in unreliability.

The main nationalized industries have among themselves made a billion-dollar profit compared with a loss of $150 million in the previous year.

But one reason was the easing of price controls in the public sector by the government. Another reason is that these labor-intensive industries — representing eight per cent of Britain's work force—were subject to two years of strictly observed pay restraint.

The "labor year" which began this month with the end of the social contract under which the unions and the government had held down wage increases may tell a different story.

Everyone will be looking to the government to prevent a wage explosion in the industries directly under its control.

The advance in national industry is, of course, part of a general economic uplift (recovery would be premature) in which the private sector has been showing some healthy gains, too.

For example, in the first six months this year, the banks have been coining it, with profit rates up as much as one-third.

Not Approved

This will make the left wing of the Labor party lick its lips because the banks and the insurance industry are its next targets for nationalization. However, the government leadership, particularly Prime Minister James Callaghan and Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey, are not keen.

A good reason: there are signs that the public does not regard the recent profit spree as a great victory for socialism.

In fact those looking for such a victory would probably say that there should be no profits at all from national industry.

But a new poll shows that most people would not approve of any more nationalization. The largest number responding, 38 per cent, actually favor denationalization of British industries; almost as many prefer to leave things as they are. But only 17 per cent want more industries taken over by the government, something that has not gone unnoticed at Number Ten Downing Street as the prime minister prepares for the policy-setting Labor party conference to be held this fall.

"I think you might find quite a lot of unity at the conference," a knowledgeable source speculated. That, in the Labor party, would be unusual.

Air Canada Upset

I refer to your editorial Air Canada Remodelled, which appeared in the July 29 edition of the Times. While much of its content is rhetorical, there are some points raised which, in the interests of keeping the record straight, should be answered.

You say ". . . Air Canada will be forced to compete equally with other airlines for domestic routes and will have its finances reorganized along the lines of most other air companies." Excellent moves, you say, on the government's part.

In fact, the chief protagonist for the financial restructuring of the airline all along has been Air Canada itself. It is a matter of record that the airline's existing financial make-up consists of only three per cent equity and 97 per cent debt. And it is not difficult to see that the massive, fixed interest payments required of us from time to time not only distort judgment of the company's financial performance but also, impose severe financial burdens upon us in bad, as well as good years.

In 1975, for example, the interest cost on the long-term debt amounted to nearly $64 million while the airline reported a net loss for the same year, of only $12.4 million. On that basis, it is not difficult to see why the airline generally favors the provisions of the new Air Canada Act.

Elsewhere, the article asks: "Should the airline traveller subsidize the ordinary taxpayer?" If nothing else, that's a new twist. The question we've frequently been asked over the years is: "Why should the Canadian taxpayer subsidize the air traveller?" Neither, of course, is true. The airline does not receive direct subsidies and is required, under the existing act of parliament, to borrow capital at prevailing rates of interest, only from the federal government or government-approved sources.

You rightly state that Air Canada is "supposed to be a provider of national service," but conversely, we are also charged with being a profitable entity. Sometimes, it is extremely difficult to achieve both and if I follow your writer's reasoning, it would seem that we're damned if we do and damned if we don't.

Finally, I take strong exception to the article's closing paragraphs suggesting that Air Canada "should learn how to run an airline before it tries to run anything else" — "serves meals that taste like fried cardboard," that we have significant overbooking problems and that our passengers are treated like "cattle being shipped on jumbo jets."

I can only say that we consider these accusations to be completely unfair and if the writer had travelled with us in recent years, he would know to be untrue.

Our meal service will stand comparison with any carrier's. It is as good as any and better than most. We know that, because our customers keep telling us.

True, there is an industry-wide problem of no-shows — people who make reservations and for one reason or another, fail to travel and do not cancel. But because we can fairly accurately predict how many such people will not appear at the airport the number of passengers actually left behind, in relation to the number of "no-shows," is small indeed.

Far from being treated like cattle, our passengers are boarded in precisely the same manner in which they are boarded on other airlines, and if your writer had done his or her research properly, he or she would be aware that the seating capacity of our wide-bodied Boeing 747s is, at the present time, 365 — compared with as many as 460 seats on similar aircraft operated by other airlines.

As to running an airline, by any accepted standards, we stack up extremely well when compared to other carriers. Our record of technical excellence and the leadership and developmental role that we have played over the years has been, and continues to be, recognized and respected within the industry.

The purpose of this letter is not to suggest that Air Canada is perfect. Of course, it is not. But then, neither are our competitors — or for that matter, other commercial enterprises. All in all, though, Canada has an excellent air transportation service — which costs the traveller about half of what airline travel costs his European counterpart — and Air Canada is proud to be a part of it. — G. F. Steeves, District Manager, Air Canada, 20 Centennial Square.

Measuring Up

I started participating in sports in 1912 and continued until the January 22, 1974 International Masters meet at Christchurch, New Zealand. Every high school soccer season I am with Spectrum high, as water boya nd general dressing room duties. My life in navy, merchant marine and civilian work has taken me to many places having played sports in over a dozen countries. I am sure I know a little about youth.

Spectrum is not a miracle of perfection. If they had been, I would have spoiled them. If I was perfect, how lonely I would be all on my own. I have found at least one dissenter in any outfit I have been with and sometimes it's a good sign, for when everybody is thinking the same, no one is thinking at all. Often in the old Mount View gym and outdoors I have watched teachers and students, and I noticed discipline in performance.

The last season playoffs one of the best soccer players and a leading goal scorer was put out of the team. I blew my top, not knowing the facts. The principal was responsible. You come here to Spectrum to study and have good class performance; if you do not measure up to the standards required, we are not interested in what you can do in sports. That is only a minor part in our program.

I have enjoyed being with Spectrum staff, players, spectators and the manager-coach more than any organization I have been with and I have been with some good outfits in this city Victoria and district high school soccer is well managed. I knew most of the coaches; they are good. The pace of play set by the players is fast with many good ball players and the refs do a very good job. Discipline speaks for itself, so few players are sent off. Last year there being two divisions made it most interesting and more competitive.

Hope to see you soon, Spectrum, and also the various coaches I know. — Dave Sadler, 219 Vancouver Street.

Inn Downgraded

The brief editorial comment in the July 22 issue of the Times concerning the proposed closing of the Wickaninnish Inn at long Beach came the day before I paid my first visit to Pacific Rim National Park and registered for a weekend at the Inn. The comment approved the closing; consequently, I feel that it represented a hasty and ill-informed judgement of the proposal. In view of the efforts of governments and the tourist industry to increase the flow of tourists and the employment dependent upon it, any proposal to reduce the range and quality of services available to visitors to the area must be considered very carefully.

We paid less than $35 a day for a twin-bedded room of ample size with a splendid view. The food and servies were of high quality and they obviously attracted many patrons to the lounge and dining room who were not registered guests. Many visitors to the park require overnight accommodation; we can't all be campers or motorhome owners. The proposed substitution of some additional information and fast-food services for those services now supplied at the Inn would seem to be a plan to downgrade the facilities available to the public and to render useless space and equipment that now return to the public purse a considerable rental income. H. C. Frick, 970 Terlane Avenue.

Postal Problem

On July 5, in the town of Erin, Ontario, a manuscript was mailed "first class" to me at 2524 Trans-Canada Highway. The package arrived looking like regurgitated toilet tissue.

I have confronted the post office at different levels locally as I expect compensation for this outrage, but have been treated to snears, excuses and bureaucratic buckpassing, name-blame exercises.

Verbally, the postal delivery man was partially blamed, the airlines, the weather, and the company which mailed the package.

In a letter from a postal official at No. 203-1230 Government Street, all they would blame in print was "the outer wrapper . . . was not sufficient" even though in person he blamed the "airlines."

Do you have any suggestions for me, a lowly commoner, in dealing with this bureaucratic monster occupied more with verses of rhetoric in inspirational ambiguity than acting responsibly for the services with which they have been entrusted?

I think I have a better understanding of the propensity of the postal union wildcat actions. — A. Hansen, 2524 Trans-Canada Highway.

Life Sacred

In a letter from a postal official at recent headline, Anglican Report Urges: Terminate Severely Retarded at Birth.

I am certainly not naive enough to believe that the majority of Anglicans agree with the above-mentioned report. For one basic belief that we all share as Christians is that all human life is sacred.

The words which leaped out at me after reading the report (and the same words were probably on the lips of most Christians), were the words spoken by Christ "whatsoever you do to the least of my brethren, you do to Me."

Yours in respect for all life, whether perfect or not. — Joe Richard, 450 Woods Avenue, Courtenay.

Irresponsible Act

Your editorial Go the Extra Mile was rather off the mark, it would seem to me. In the first place it was an irresponsible act to put 2,4-D into the Okanagan Lakes system and it was done firstly in secret last winter. Does one believe that this poison stays in one place in water? Then they will believe that water runs uphill. This irresponsible government of B.C. is the one to choke off regarding such stupidity. The departments of agriculture and forestry have, along with B.C. Hydro and B.C. Telephone, been responsible for the use of herbicides and pesticides of DDT derivatives. In the late 1946-8 era the deputy minister of agriculture in B.C. cautioned the use of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T, as well as the accentuation of household and garden packets on the store shelves. Dr. J. B. Munroe was retired early.

Regardless of what people may believe, the use of the above in the Okanagan Valley and elsewhere in that drainage area has polluted this system far beyond reclamation.

But for Mr. Nielsen, to say "there is just so much the state can do to protect people," that is the most stupid statement.

The people certainly need to be protected from this government and that is obvious. — Don D. Fraser, 1161 Burnside Road West.

The Cigarette Industry Finds a Silver Lining

By MARTIN O'MALLEY
The Globe and Mail

Canadians smoked 50,900,000,000 cigarettes in 1971. Since then there have been all kinds of reports warning of the vile dangers of the weed, anti-smoking militants have charged the barricades, taxes on cigarettes have soared, laws have been proposed and proclaimed to curtail the freedom of puffers, and cigarette smoking increasingly is portrayed as unseemly and unfashionable. What, then, has been the effect on the cigarette industry after all this flack?

Canadians smoked 60,700,000,000 in 1976. Even the percapita usage has increased, to 2,618 in 1976 from 2,343 in 1971.

"Why do people smoke?" asked Robert H. Hawkes, president of Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Limited. "There's been God knows how many books and articles written saying tobacco is a simple pleasure. People enjoy it. It does relax them. It's been proven time and again that cigarettes do relieve stress and stress kills a hell of a lot more people . . . than cigarettes do."

'Simple Pleasure'

Hawkes, pulling on another of his company's Special Mild brand, said he has been smoking for the past 18, 19 years — since he joined Rothmans as an upwardly mobile lawyer in his late twenties. His doctor advised him to quit a year ago because he didn't want him coughing before a hernia operation but in two weeks Hawkes resumed his "simple pleasure" and has been smoking a pack a day ever since. His 16-year-old son also smokes, cigarettes and pipes, but this doesn't bother Mr. Hawkes in the least.

"If you look at the over-all reaction of younger people today, the more you tell them not to do something, the more they're going to go ahead and do it," Hawkes said. "The prime example is the marijuana thing. You legislate against something and people are going to react against it. We've got too many regulations in our society today that simply say you must not — and people are challenging them. In the United States, people are saying, 'Just a minute, I have a right to certain things.' We as Canadians really haven't got our feet wet yet in this whole civil rights thing."

Hawkes believes that the case against cigarettes hasn't been proved, that provincial and federal taxes on cigarettes are becoming "ridiculous," that cigarette smoking may annoy non-smokers but doesn't injure them, that anti-smoking legislation is useless and dangerous because it is impossible to enforce and fosters disrespect of the law. Despite the various movements against cigarette smoking, Hawkes doesn't seem bothered. For the year ended March 31, 1977, his company turned a profit of $19.3-million, down nearly $2-million over the previous year but not down enough to keep Mr. Hawkes awake nights.

"I really can't see it in the numbers," he said when asked if the anti-smoking campaigns were hurting. "Perhaps if there hadn't been these attacks the numbers would be greater. I would prefer to have an industry that sells a product that somebody wants without being attacked all the time. It doesn't make life any simpler."

Nevertheless, the attacks continue. The Tobacco Institute Newsletter "prepared by the Institute staff to inform the industry of newsworthy developments") lists the latest from the front lines. John Ralston, former head coach of the Denver Broncos, tells the American Cancer Society that the sports world should be used as a vehicle for anti-smoking campaigns. Dr. Melvyn D. Moore, a criminal justice professor, tells the National Drug Abuse Conference: "Alcohol and cigaret smoking are unquestionably more harmful to the body than heroin." The Governor of Tennessee proclaims Clean Ashtray Day to "stamp out smoking."

But for every cloud — cough, cough — there is a silver lining. The Wall Street Journal has a story on Ozone Sickness, "which affects non-smokers more than smokers." And there's a nice story in the Baltimore Sun about a scale-model tobacco ship — a 14-month, 9,000-hour project — donated to the Smithsonian Institution. The New York Times reports that "ordinary fluorescent lamps cause mutations in the chromosomes of hamster cells grown in glass dishes, mutations which might be the cause of cancer."

Hawkes produced a Canadian example that says cigarette smoke is not a health hazard to asthmatics. Researchers at the Gage Institute of Toronto tested asthmatics by putting them in two rooms, one with normal air and one containing machine-produced cigarette smoke. Some of the asthmatics complained of eye irritation and coughing but a report concluded that "no systematic physiologic changes occur to the asthmatics even with the acute exposure to cigarette smoke."

Visiting a cigarette company is like going back in time travel, especially if the visitor is a smoker. No thank-you-for-not-smoking signs here. Lots of ashtrays. Not a twinge of guilt lighting up in the waiting room. There is a handsome wooden box on the coffee table and it is loaded with cigarettes fresh from the factory. At a receptionist's desk, packages of cigarettes are opened, with a cigarette nudged out, beckoning.

Free for Workers

The only no-smoking area is the factory, and that's only because of fire regulations. The 1,900 employees get free smokes, part of a "quality check" to make sure that any flaws are detected before they are trucked across the country. They are only discouraged from smoking competing brands. "If you're committed to working for a corporation," Hawkes explains, "you're usually committed to supporting its product." He went so far as to say he couldn't recall any Rothmans president who didn't smoke something.

Peter Bone, the man in charge of public relations, offers you a sample of the new Special Mild. He is pleased when you accept one, and he pleasantly discourages you from smoking your own, competing brand.

"What if your secretary smokes duMauriers?" Hawkes is asked.

"I would ask her not to. Certainly not at the office. I wouldn't want you to come in and see her smoking duMauriers."

"But at Ford of Canada, some employees drive Volkswagens and Chevies . . ."

"The cigarette industry is a lot more committed to its particular brands," Hawkes says.

To those who say that cigarette smokers are a foul nuisance, Hawkes says there are worse nuisances in society and nobody is proposing laws to regulate them. Gumchewers, for example. Or people with horrendous body odor. Loud mouths. Why not pass laws to keep people with a bad cold or the flu out of public places?

"My pleasure should not infringe on somebody else's ability to enjoy hisself," he says. "There are clearly areas where it's not the polite thing to smoke, such as on an elevator. It's dangerous, squeezed in there with a lighted cigarette. And when it comes to sitting down to a meal in someone's home, you're going to ask, 'May I?'" In a public restaurant, he refuses ask the same of people at the next table. "Most restaurants have sufficiently good air-handling equipment to get rid of smoke."

Health dangers?

"It's arguable," he says. "There may or may not be. I haven't seen it proved in hard facts yet. You can say that the incidence of disease has increased at the same rate as the use of the hand telephone. Doctors I talk to say increased incidence of lung cancer is due to better diagnosis. What is cancer today may have been pneumonia 20 years ago. Tuberculosis is markedly less today. And there's black lung, etc. It's quite clear in the statistics that people die of lung cancer who have never smoked a cigaret in their lives."

He believes that what is diagnosed as lung cancer often is a secondary cancer that began elsewhere in the body and migrated to the lungs. "No, we don't have a vested interest in ignoring the dangers. We have a vested interest in making sure we have a product that is safe. If we as an industry can find that there is something wrong then it's in our best interest to take it out of the product. When you analyse cigarette smoke, you find 1,200 elements. Selective filtration is within our know-how, but which of those 1,200 elements should we take out?"

The 1,200 elements are called total particulate matter or TPM and this is called tar. "I don't like calling it tar," Hawkes says. "There's a whole range of things that combine to give you flavor, a whole vast range of things. What we're saying is let us find out if there is an element that's harmful and then we'll take it out. It's very hard for someone in the tobacco business to look themselves in the mirror in the morning and say . . . I'm going to go out and sell a bunch of those cigarettes and it's going to hurt someone. That becomes a real, personal morality problem."

The new mild brands, low-tar and low-nicotine brands, are the rage today and Rothmans of Pall Mall has come out with new mild brands, trumpeting them with multi-million advertising campaigns, but Hawkes won't say they are safer than the old brands. "This is the direction that the industry is going on a competitive basis. You're in the market to compete. No, I won't say flatly that they're safer."

Banning cigarette advertising doesn't seem to affect total sales of cigarettes. In the United States, television and radio advertising of cigarettes is prohibited by law, but advertising money simply has been channelled into print and billboard advertising. Smokers in the United States have been frightened by health scares but they soon rebound and keep buying more cigarettes. In 1964, the Surgeon General reported that cigarette smoking is associated with coronary artery disease, chronic bronchitis and emphysema, and is "casually related to lung cancer in men." Cigarette sales for the first six months of 1964 dropped by 11 billion, but when the shock wore off sales kept growing. By 1968, 540 billion cigarettes were sold; in the United States, 35 billion more than in 1964. Last year, 620 billion cigarettes were sold in the United States.

The tobacco industry in Canada voluntarily withdrew from radio and television advertising five years ago, but sales keep rising. Mr. Hawkes says sales would keep rising even if there was a total ban on advertising. There was a total ban on cigarette advertising in Italy and cigarette sales increased to 89.7 billion in 1976 from 70.8 billion in 1971.

Tax Spurs Smuggling

Hawkes says the tobacco industry in Canada is fighting back against excessive taxes on their product. He has reports that cite an enormous increase in interstate cigarette smuggling in the United States. Cigarettes are brought to New York from North Carolina, where state taxes are lower, with the result that "one out of every two cigarettes in New York is smuggled."

Hawkes keeps returning to the "simple pleasures" of smoking, the "anti-stress" factor. "The typical example is the guy waiting for his wife to have their first baby. What's he going to do? He's not going to sit there and get bombed, but he does smoke a lot of cigarettes. It gives your hands something to do . . ."

"The first thing you did with a wounded man in World War Two was offer him a cigarette," added Bone, the public relations man.

"One of the worst things to me," said Hawkes, "is getting in close quarters on a subway car and the guy next to me hasn't washed for a week . . ."

"Exactly!" said Bone.

And there's the Tobacco Institute Newsletter that says a hand-carved block meerschaum pipe, imported from Turkey and priced at $8,000, is on display at the Nat Sherman Tobacco Shop in New York City. Says so right in The New York Times.

You've Come A Long Way, Baby, But There's More to Go

By KATHARINE WHITEHORN
London Observer

From the male point of view, the most perfect professional woman was probably the first doctor. Not Elizabeth Garrett Anderson, but a certain Dr. James Miranda Barry. She wore men's clothes, behaved like a man, even became an army surgeon; the distasteful and inconvenient fact of being a woman she had the good sense to conceal till the day she died, when a post-mortem revealed all.

Women have come a long way, baby, as the cigarette ads proclaim; it's still a puzzle why they haven't come further.

On the face of it, there are plenty of successful women around. There's Margaret Thatcher, heading the Tories, and Shirley Williams in the cabinet; Mavis Maullin, accountant, earned more before she left to set up on her own than any accountant had ever done in her firm.

The Atomic Energy Commission in America had for a while the benefit of Dixy Lee Ray, oceanographer; put on it as a sop to Women's Lib, she rapidly showed herself to be the brightest person there.

We had Anne Armstrong, an ambassador; the first dog in space, Laika, was female (though I fear it only encouraged the chaps to believe that only bitches get to the top); they've let women into the Stock Exchange, the Punch table and quite a few Oxbridge colleges which would actually have done better to keep the quality of their food and conversation a secret.

But the fact remains that any dinner of the British Institute of Management is 99 per cent chaps; any boardroom regards itself as being overwhelmingly female-oriented if it has one woman among those present. When I pointed out that a nationalized industry had 14 women out of 250 top management, none of them in the front rank, I was told that wasn't bad for industry.

When Lord Goodman had the American saviours of the London Observer to dinner at University College, it was an all-male dinner and Lady Bullock had to take the tycoon's wives to a restaurant, which may have served a useful purpose in showing the Americans how restfully Victorian was the atmosphere with which they had to contend.

Most of the given reasons for women not being at the top are nonsense. People tell you in thick, secretive whispers about how it is with them—well, you know, once a month.

True, they have moods—which come on at predictable times and for which you can take tablets; men, as anyone who lives with one knows perfectly well, have moods too, but as they haven't got a good excuse they have to pretend they're objective, and relate to the price of copper or the slackness of the sales force; far more dangerous.

"Women have babies." They do; but the higher up the rung they get, the more they'll be likely to keep their numbers decently few and turn those they have over to competent help. And I've never seen why a company that is pefectly willing to let a bloke have a few months off for a coronary brought on by too much eating and drinking cannot let a woman go sick with a small pregnancy brought on by other indulgences.

It's a bit more true to say that women don't think like men. Not in "assessing the problem;" the days are long gone when anyone pretended there was actually anything inferior in the brains of women; but in their reluctance to conform to the standard male behavior patterns. What's so heartbreaking is that, if anyone had the wit to see it, this would be their greatest asset.

"We cannot substitute for experience forgone," I once heard a civil servant intone; his phrases polished with much use like pebbles from the sea. It didn't seem to occur to him (or to anyone else) that if what is wrong with the civil service is its utter inability ever to see that the way it has always done things may be the wrong way of doing them, then someone bounding back fresh from the nursery with a few new slants would be just the thing; but no. She would upset things. She wouldn't fit in.

It's still true that girls face a different job scene right from the start. The technical ladder from school on up has a lot of rungs missing for them; fewer apprenticeships, and those mainly in hairdressings; very little day release; very often a dearth of good maths, science and technical teaching at school.

In a mixed school the girls will too often be steered towards the arts, the soft subjects and doing wardrobe in the school play, while it's the boys who get the science, the technical subjects and the job of wiring the hall for sound.

"But the girls themselves don't try," wail some would-be progressive businessmen, and they have a point. Girls don't rush forward, all maiden eagerness, to join the ranks of the chemical engineers; they aren't seen pressing, forty deep, against the closed doors of the Railway and Maintenance (Works) recruiting office; very few of them, when asked what they want to do with their lives, say, "I yearn to be area sales manager for a fertilizer firm."

There are good reasons for this. The first is their teachers, who know precious little about any jobs except their own, and presumably wouldn't have become teachers in the first place if they could have thought of anything more interesting to do.

The second is their mothers: if Mum has a cushy pad in the home counties as the wife of a middle-management man, she sees her daughter's future in terms of parties and boyfriends and marrying a nicely-spoken young man who will be polite to her mother. Rare indeed the Mum, like Rosemary's in Tender Is The Night, who said, "You were raised for work, not necessarily for marriage . . ." And rarer still, perhaps, the fathers who show their daughters that they are expected to do something active and positive and interesting with the brains (if any) that God gave them.

Why do women seem to do so much better in some jobs than others? Girls, like men, are the victims of the images that jobs present rather than what the jobs are in reality. If clean young gentlemen don't want to become engineers because they think engineers are inarticulate, unpolished hunks in hairy green suits, able to converse only about the stress factors of concrete, so do clean young girls, who not only don't want to become people like that, they don't want to be surrounded by people like that.

At a careers course at Brunel recently, they had three young female engineers talking with excitement and clarity about the jobs they were doing, and the whole audience was plainly getting keen; then they made the awful mistake of parading a few of the teachers'(male) who would give the courses who were of a dullness so striking that we all went to sleep.

But there are other factors. Girls can do well at design, writing, scholarship, literacy agency, music, acting—anything where the results can be seen: no one can say this is a female bit of music or this is a female design. They tend not to get so far where the intangible hierarchies of power are involved. As soon as you get the big power structures, you get a set of ritual hoops through which the rising executive must pass; it is only in pure theory that all these stages are necessary for his development, but they do serve as a useful filter for keeping out the eccentric, the faint-hearted and the ones who are not to pattern—which means the women.

What the women are really up against is the feeling that women are not normal; that they are weakening.

Graham Cleverley was the lad who first thought to look at the techniques of management and equate them to the warrior rituals of primitive tribes (the initiation, the ritual meals, the display, the bonding and so forth) and he realized that the conviction of the chaps that if you let a woman in the boardroom you might as well light your cigarette with the shares, equates with the fears of warriors that women upset your mana, pollute you with their weakness.

He tells scathingly of a chap who was so appalled to find that a menstruating woman had walked across his blanket that he killed her and died of fright in a fortnight.

"This is why," says he, "campaigns for women's equality never get anywhere, based as they are on logic and reason; they have no chance against their opponents, who are activated by magic."

And this, I'm sure, is why men cannot forgive a woman for getting to the top, and why, if anything ever goes wrong, she is done for.

Old Desai in India put his gnarled finger on the nub when he said he used to believe in women, but not since Mrs. Gandhi. If a man gets to the top and makes a mess of it, there is no widespread move to discontinue men in top jobs; but if a woman does the same thing there are loud cries of "There now!"

We are gaining ground, we are making progress; but there's a hell of a long way to go.

Pipe Debate Cutoff 'Shocks' Bennett

The legislature's debate on the proposed Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline came to a sudden end Tuesday as members adjourned for supper.

The debate was ended, cutting off remarks by Premier Bill Bennett, when Lorne Nicolson (NDP—Nelson-Creston) drew Speaker Ed Smith's attention to the clock which showed 6 p.m.

Such an observation brings automatic adjournment, and any adjournment brings an end to an emergency debate.

The supper adjournment indicated few MLAs considered the debate on what conditions the province should impose on the construction of a pipeline through the province to be an urgent matter.

Outside the house, Bennett told reporters he found the "I want to go home to supper" attitude "very shocking."

The premier said, he had nearly completed his remarks, and had not intended to disclose what demands he would take to the federal government on the construction of the proposed $10 billion pipeline through northeastern B.C.

"The negotiations will have to take place without the benefit of the press," he said. "The provinces and Canada have to act as one."

In the legislature, Bennett claimed full credit for the fact that the Alaska Highway gas pipeline project has received approval from the National Energy Board and the Canadian government, and is being seriously considered by the United States.

"This government has done more than any other government in both Canada and the U.S. to this date to have the Alcan proposal even considered by the two governments and their regulatory agencies," he said.

Bennett predicted that 3,000 new jobs will result directly from construction of the B.C. section of the pipeline with another 3,000 jobs opening up in supply industries.

The Times reported Tuesday that the project would create 30,000 jobs for B.C.

The estimate, provided by a spokesman for the Pipeline Construction Association of Canada, included 8,000 persons directly employed on the line and another 22,000 in support services.

However, the 30,000 figure would cover the project in both B.C. and the Yukon.

Bennett agreed with opposition speakers who earlier said that B.C. workers should have priority in construction of the B.C. section of the pipeline, and that compensation should be paid by developers for social and environmental damage.

NDP leader Dave Barrett said developers should pay about $840 million for the right to build the pipeline through the province.

He said that figure is seven per cent — the same rate as provincial sales tax, he said — of the $12 billion he predicts will be the final cost of the pipeline. The cost of the project now is estimated at $6.5 billion.

Barrett also said B.C. should get a written agreement with both the federal government and oil companies, ensuring that Canada retains control over any natural gas flowing from the Canadian Arctic through a possible Dempster Highway hookup.

"I plead to the government to take the position with the federal government and with the United States that that tap at the Dempster connection will never go into foreign control," he said.

"That has to be point number one in all negotiations. Without that requirement, we are going like lambs to the slaughter on the same baiss as we did with the Columbia River treaty."

Barrett said that, "in principle, I think it's a mistake to risk the Alcan route," but added he is resigned to it.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace told the legislature that, "the crucial option which Canada has to consider is whether it should participate in the Alcan project at all."

"The cost-benefit analysis must be weighed with great care and precision, and in seeking th obvious benefits, British Columbia must state clearly, the price beyond which it will not go, in seeking these benefits," he said.

The Conservative leader said that, "guarantees for the $542 million Dempster link would obviously be one of the strongest conditions Canada must insist upon."

Other conditions, he said, should be adequate compensation for adverse social and environmental consequences, priority to employment of B.C. workers, settlement of native land claims, full use of the B.C. Railway and paving of the Alaska Highway.

Gibson, who launched the debate, suggested that the province insist on four principles in its negotiations with Ottawa.

The Liberal leader urged that minimum standards be established, noting that the NEB had recommended, for example, that a special $200 million fund be set up to cover social and economic disruptions in the Yukon.

"British Columbians will not be treated less well than Yukoners," he said.

He said that B.C. should also receive a "proportionate share of the Canadian economic dividends" which will come out of this project.

Geo. Weston Ltd.

George Weston Ltd., which had been operating at a loss, reports it has returned to a profit position for the six months ended June 30. Earnings came to $8,363,000 or 71 cents a share compared with a loss a year earlier of $5,752,000. The company was plagued last year with strikes in its forest product operations and the loss of its United States business interests. In a statement, the food manufacturing and distribution firm said the outlook "may be considered mildly favorable."

United Westland

United Westland Resources Ltd. announced it will provide $850,000 to complete the first 10 wells in the firm's drilling program in Washington County, Ohio. The Toronto-based firm is an oil and gas exploration company which conducts its activities in the United States.

Cornat Industries

Cornat Industries reports six-month earnings ending June 30, 1977, amounting to $2,773,000 compared with $2,629,000 for the same period in 1976. Earnings per share for the first six months in 1977 amounted to 53 cents per average share outstanding, compared with 52 cents for the same period last year. On a fully diluted basis, the earnings were 52 cents compared with 50 cents. Consolidated revenues for the six-month period amounted to $146 million compared with $63 million the previous year, the increase being attributable to the inclusion of two operating company results which were not applicable to the first half of last year.

Neonex

Neonex International Ltd. has announced that by the end of September it intends to propose a merger with Jim Pattison Ltd., which would result in a company incorporated by Neonex chairman James Pattison. Shareholders will have the option of receiving $3 for each Neonex share or a 5½ per cent, non-voting preferred share. Pattison now controls more than 3.1 million of Neonex's 7.2 million shares. Neonex shares were last quoted at $2.50 and were halted from trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange Monday.

Canadian Pacific

Canadian Pacific Ltd. reported net income of $126.4 million or $1.75 a share for the six months ended June 30, compared with $72.9 million or $1 a share for the same period last year. The results, a record for the period, include extraordinary income of $7.2 million, representing the company's share of the net gain by CP Investments on the sale of Canpac Leasing Ltd. in April. The six-month advance was attributed mainly to improved results by CP Investments, CP Rail and CP Air, but was offset by a major decrease recorded by CP Ships. The higher income from the investment wing was broadly based and reflected better product prices and a favorable exchange rate for the United States dollar. CP Air recorded a small profit in the second quarter and lost substantially less than last year when pilots and air traffic controllers staged a June work stoppage. The improved performance also reflects fare increases and cost reductions.

Lonvest Corp.

Lonvest Corp. reports it will buy 99,000 shares of London Life Insurance Co. at $113 a share, or 57 per cent of those tendered by shareholders when its offer expired Aug. 5. Lonvest is an investment company established by the Jeffery family of London, Ont.

Funds generated from operations amounted to $2,580,000, an increase of 49 per cent over the $1,733,000 realized in the 1976 period. Net earnings of $1,483,000 were 93 per cent higher than the 1976 figure of $769,000. On a per share basis, this equalled 24 cents per common share in 1977 and 13 cents per common share in 1976. Working capital stood at $3 million on June 30, 1977 as compared to $4 million a year ago.

Republic

Republic Steel Corp. of Cleveland lost $6 million during the first quarter of 1977, then bounced back with a second-quarter profit of $22.2 million to bring first-half earnings to $16 million. Net income in the second quarter this year compares to second quarter income of $24 million in 1976 and earnings for the first half of this year compares to earnings of $38 million in the same period a year ago. Second-quarter sales totalled $777 million this year, compared to $677.4 million during the same period in 1976.

Thomson Newspapers

Thomson Newspapers Ltd. reports net income for the six months ended June 30 of $21,011,992 or 41.9 cents a share compared with $18,138,513 or 36 cents a share for the first half of 1976. Sales for the first half of 1977 were $121,381,683 compared with $104,844,111 last year. The company said a significant portion of its growth occurred in its United States operations. Results in Canada were "within the guidelines established under the federal anti-inflation program." So far this year, the company has acquired one daily newspaper — in Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

Crown Life

Crown Life Insurance Co. reports an increase in sales of 27 per cent or $2.8 billion in life and annuity coverage for the first six months of 1977. Total premium income was up 25 per cent in the period to $250 million. Earnings were $1.44 million, or 72 cents a share for the first half of 1977 compared with one cent a share for the corresponding period in 1976.

Algas Resources

Algas Resources Ltd., a subsidiary of Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., has launched a test program to determine the feasibility of recovering methane gas trapped in coal seams. Sproule Associates of Calgary are acting as field consultants for the tests. Algas said that while methane is the equivalent of quality natural gas, "It is vented to the atmosphere as a costly and dangerous nuisance in underground coal mines. If the experiment is successful, it offers the potential of providing a useful, and perhaps very large, increment to natural gas supplies from Canada's western sedimentary basin," the company said. "At the same time it would enhance underground coal mining by reducing safety hazards and the costs of the present elaborate ventilating systems."

Israelis Spurn PLO Meetings

JERUSALEM (AP) — In one of its most-serious rifts with the United States over Middle East policy, Israel has refused to accept the Palestine Liberation Organization as a partner in peace talks.

Prime Minister Menahem Begin on Tuesday night rejected U.S. efforts to bring the PLO into Middle East negotiations, reminding U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance that the PLO is committed in its charter to the abolition of the Jewish state.

"That organization, the philosophy of which is based on an Arabic Mein Kampf, is no partner whatsoever and never will be a partner to hold any talks," Begin said, referring to Adolf Hitler's anti-Semitic treatise Mein Kampf.

"Their aim is to destroy and annihilate our people," said Begin, speaking at a state dinner in Vance's honor. "Some say we are sensitive about it, and we are. It is logical to learn from experience."

In response, Vance urged the Israelis to take bold steps in the quest for peace

Troops En Route To Ethiopia

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuter) — Somalia's ambassador to Kenya said today that between 5,000 and 9,000 troops from outside Africa are on their way to Ethiopia.

Asked at a news conference whether the troops are Cuban, Ambassador Hussein Haaji ali Dualeh said: "I would rather not comment on that. You will know when they arrive."

The ambassador said: "We have information that foreign troops have been invited by (Ethiopian head of state) Mengistu Haile-Mariam and they are on their way to Ethiopia.

"Where they will be located we don't know," he said. "Whether they will join the fighting in Eritrea or fight against the Western Somalia Liberation Front (WSLF) or whether they will be there just to keep Mengistu in power, we really don't know."

Cape Town Whites Join Black Protest

CAPE TOWN (UPI) — Police fired tear gas today into a crowd of blacks joined by about 100 white clergymen, social workers, students and the wife of an American diplomat to protest the bulldozing of a shantytown.

Icy winter winds blew the fumes away and the police withdrew without taking further action.

The Rev. David Russell, an Anglican priest from the nearby black township of Nyanga, said the whites had come to the squatter camp "to be with the people."

"If our presence here will prevent the front-end loader from being used, we will have achieved our purpose," he said.

On Tuesday, black squatters set fire to some of their shacks ahead of a bulldozer that plowed through the makeshift village, declared a health hazard under a sprinkling of thrown bottles.

So far about 150 shacks have been torn down and a government spokesman said the whites would not be allowed to stop the demolition work.

"If they interfere, we will have them removed by the police," he said.

When the crowd of whites arrived, many of the squatters began praying and singing and police fired about 12 tear gas cannisters to disperse them.

But the gale force winds howling over the camp blew the choking fumes away and police withdrew to the opposite side of the broad Modderdam road outside Cape Town.

Among the whites was Mrs. Judy Williams, wife of an American consular official stationed in Cape Town, Tom Williams. She was at the scene as a member of the "Women for Peace" movement, and told reporters she wished more whites had shown up.

Many of the squatters huddled in the wreckage of their shanties against the chill wind, or moved in with friends. Others packed their belongings and slipped into the thick bushes on the other side of Modderdam road.

Police said blacks hurled bottles Tuesday at the yellow bulldozer that razed shacks in the squatter camp, and the crowd was dispersed with one tear gas cannister.

Another crowd of thousands of blacks armed with rocks, sticks and bottles were confronted by police with attack dogs across a camp road but there was not major violence. One man was arrested for throwing a rock at police.

DOCTOR, NUN KILLED

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Black nationalist guerrillas have killed a white doctor and a nun working at a mission hospital in western Rhodesia, military authorities said today.

The spokesman said the mission was in the Lupani area, about 250 miles from Salisbury but he did not know its name or any other details about the incident.

Reporters were being taken to the scene.

Rhodesia has been faced with a growing volume of terrorist attacks in recent months.

A bomb believed set by black terrorists exploded in a crowded Woolworth department store in Salisbury Saturday. Killing 11 persons and injuring 79 others.

The incident reported today was the second attack against a mission in western Rhodesia in four days.

According to a government communique Sunday, an Austrian building contractor, Rudi Kogler, was killed in a gunfight with five guerrillas when he visited the Regina Mundi mission in Nyamandlhovu district.

The communique said the insurgents stole watches from the staff and pupils at the mission, nearly $500 from the priest in charge and a rifle from Kogler.

$1M Kidnap Man Still Mystery

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — The whereabouts of a 57-year-old credit union employee, being held by kidnappers for a $1-million ransom, remained a mystery today as Quebec provincial police continued their investigation.

Police say they have been unable to enter into direct contact with the captors of Charles Marion, abducted Saturday from his country cottage by two armed, hooded men and driven off in his own van.

The only communications have been through two notes. Their receipt was confirmed by cryptic messages broadcast at the kidnappers' request on a local radio station.

Marion's van was discovered Tuesday in the parking lot of the municipal airport in this city 90 miles east of Montreal. A special investigation team has started dusting the vehicle for fingerprints.

There were no traces of blood or other signs of violence in the van, a police spokesman said.

Earlier, radio station CHLT cut into a San Diego Padres-Montreal Expos baseball game with the announcement: "We interrupt this program to issue a message in the public interest."

Radio reporter Richard Desmarais then repeated three times: "Mr. Nebets wants to talk to Mr. Noiram." The message was broadcast again an hour later.

The two names mentioned were the names, spelled backwards, of Marion and his boss Claude Steben, manager of the credit union.

A police spokesman said broadcast of the message was demanded by the kidnappers to confirm receipt of a note sent to police and to the credit union, the Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke Est.

"The ball is in their court now," said Cpl. Laval Lacroix of the provincial police.

"We haven't been able to bargain with them because they are not talking to us. However, the door is still open and we've done what they wanted."

A similar message had been broadcast on CHLT to confirm receipt of an earlier note which demanded $1 million for Marion's safe return. The first note was found in the night safety deposit box of another credit union, Cpl. Lacroix said.

Police refused to release details on the second note except to say that it was different in content and not left in the same place as the first one.

Marion, a credit manager, has been employed at the Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke Est for 35 years.

'Lean and Mean' Overseas CIA Eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA Director Stanfield Turner said today a planned cut of 800 operatives from the agency's clandestine services is designed to build a "lean and mean" overseas team.

Turner earlier this week told Central Intelligence Personnel of the planned cuts over the next 26 months in the Directorate of Operations, which carries out covert and clandestine intelligence operations overseas.

"What we are cutting back on is exessive overhead that has accumulated over the years," Turner said today. "... there was a big reduction in the CIA after our withdrawal from Vietnam and we just didn't cut back far enough. And we got more fat, got more overhead than we can afford."

Turner was interviewed on the NBC Today program.

Hydro New 'Blue-Eyed Arab'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the Bonneville Power Administration in Washington state says British Columbians "right now are the new blue-eyed Arabs" because of the prices B.C. Hydro is charging northwest states for surplus electricity.

The spokesman said in an interview this week that utility companies in the U.S. are not buying power from B.C. It is being bought on behalf of a United States federal agency and by large-scale industrial users such as aluminum plants.

"Frankly, they (B.C. Hydro) are asking too much for it. You folks in Canada right now are the new blue-eyed Arabs," he said.

In a four-month period this summer, B.C. Hydro estimates it will make more than $12 million in sales to the U.S., at prices 10 times what they were three years ago.

A spokesman for Hydro said: "You get the best price you can . . . the same applies when we require power from the U.S."

He said the price for each sale depends on the market value at the time, with a big factor being the availability of alternative sources.

In addition to an estimated total of $12.4 million in sales of water-generated electricity from May to the end of August, B.C. Hydro sold another $3.4 million worth of thermal-generated power in May, at an unstated profit.

Northwestern states are short of electricity because of the lowest rainfall and snowfall in this century. The shortage has been compounded because of deals made last year in which a number of public utilities and industries in the northwest agreed to sell power to California, which also has a drought.

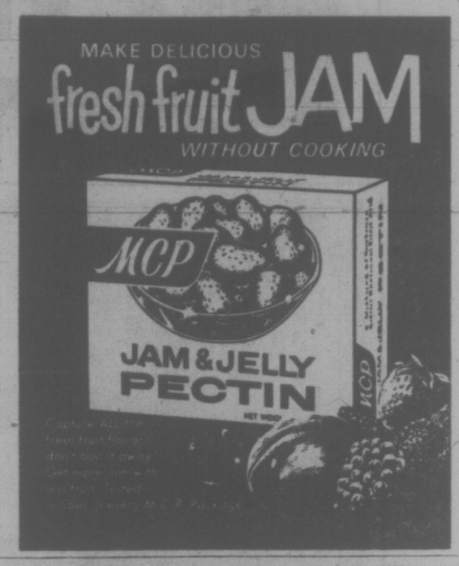
NO WATER SHORTAGE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A water shortage this summer in the Lower Mainland has been virtually ruled out, says a Greater Vancouver Regional District official.

Chief Engineer Doug Mackay said that Capilano reservoir water level is down nine feet and Seymour reservoir is down 7½ feet but that such drops are common at this time of year.

Mackay said Surrey and North Delta were having pressure problems because of lawn sprinkling but that these were not severe.

Fears earlier that light snowfalls would cause a water shortage were dismissed after the coast received rainfall in June and July, Mackay said.



BEAR KILL in Ontario's Algonquin Park has been reduced from 45 a few years ago to just two this year as a result of trapping the beasts and transporting them out of the region. Park employee Ken Driscoll warily frees a 342-pounder.

Cherry Point Ruling Deferred

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The Energy Facility Site Evaluation Council has delayed until Aug. 22 a decision on whether to approve an order stating that a proposed oil port at Cherry Point would be consistent with local land use plans.

The proposed order, drafted by a council subcommittee, was handed to members Monday. Action was delayed, however, to give members and the Whatcom County representatives time to study it.

While the order stated that the proposal does not conflict with Whatcome County land use plans, it ignored the coastal zone management plan that bars establishment of an oil port east of Port Angeles.

Meanwhile, Clallam County in Washington State has filed suit to strike down a clause in the state-federal coastal zone management plan that, in effect, would make Port Angeles the only practical site for a supertanker port in Washington.

County Prosecutor Craig Ritchie, said in the complaint that government representatives, including Governor Dixie Lee Ray, "failed to comply with the National Environmental Policy Act . . . as no adequate detailed statement of environmental impact was ever prepared on that portion of the program."

The suit, to be heard at an unspecified date by United States District Judge Donald Voorhees, contends the clause has no force or effect because it was added without a public hearing or being mentioned in an environmental impact statement.

PARIS (AP) — Eight persons kidnapped a French banker Tuesday, locked him in a big wooden bread-storage box and holed up with their victim in an abandoned cafe outside Paris. But police tracked them down and freed 50-year-old Roland Bernard unharmed.

Kennedy 'Public Menace', Immigration Opposes Bail

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal immigration department says in a submission filed with the immigration appeal board and released Tuesday that suspected Irish Republican Army terrorist James Kennedy is a "public menace" whose detention should be continued for the safety of the public.

The submission, filed in opposition to Kennedy's application for bail, also alleges that Kennedy recently threatened RCMP and immigration officers.

However, Kennedy's lawyer, John Taylor, said Tuesday that the alleged threats were taken out of context by the department and would be answered when Kennedy appears before the board.

Kennedy has applied for bail pending an appeal to the board for refugee status which, if granted, would override a July 14 deportation order against him. No dates for the hearings have been set.

The immigration department submission includes declarations from several officers who say they were threatened by Kennedy:

—Special immigration inquiry officer Jack Betteridge declared Kennedy told him: "Mr. Betteridge, you are an enemy of the Irish people and will be tried in front of an Irish tribunal. You are also a . . . fascist pig and justice will be served on you."

—Immigration officer Philip Hasset declared Kennedy told him that the ripple effect of arresting Kennedy would have him (Hasset) "peeled like an apple".

—RCMP Sgt. William Ingenthron declared Kennedy told him "You might be successful in handing me over to British intelligence. I'll do my time, but I'll come back some day and I'll get you."

The submission was made available to Taylor after he had complained during a British Columbia Supreme Court hearing Monday that his client would never know the contents of the "secret submission".

He said Kennedy will adequately respond to the alleged threats.

"The statements are taken out of context by the department," he said. "It is obvious the three officers have complained. But the fact remains there is no charge against Kennedy in his native land or in Canada, and it must be remembered no country has launched extradition proceedings against him."

The submission also quotes testimony from the special immigration inquiry, identifying Kennedy as James Joseph McCann who has an extensive criminal record for theft, obtaining credit, property and goods by means of false pretences, and for escaping from prison. McCann has also been linked to terrorist activity including attempted arson.

It's Time to Zap the Speed Freaks at Shawnigan

max low

Dale Carnegie mightn't be too happy with the idea but I'm thinking of writing a book and calling it "How to Lose Friends and Influence People."

My column on a brief trip to England caused enough controversy; but now I'm going to stick my neck out and make a few enemies of friends and neighbors by saying I favor a powerboat ban on Shawnigan Lake.

The once-tranquil little piece of water 20 miles from Victoria has long been a haven for city folk eager to escape that one plague of the metropolis: NOISE. They came to fish quietly, to glide silently by in canoes or just to relax in the sun. They sought and found that very thing that makes Canada's lakes so special — peace.

But no longer is there a haven at Shawnigan. So many city folk now flock to the lake and bring their noise with them. On every summer weekend — and often on weekdays, too — the speed freaks are out in force, towing skiers in all directions from dawn until well into darkness, or causing havoc by simply roaring up and down the length of the waterway for kicks.

The speed merchants have taken over. You risk your life going too far from the shore in a canoe; sailboats haven't a hope in hell of avoiding them; and a swimmer hasn't a chance of being seen bobbing about in the water while these boats move so incredibly fast and their drivers (many of them too young to be allowed to drive a car on our roads) often spend more time peering over their shoulders watching the skiers behind.

Often it isn't the residents of the lake who are to blame. Some have been there many years, are good skiers and know boats and how to treat them. But, with the restrictions being placed on lakes nearer Victoria, more and more weekenders are hauling their boats over the Malahat. They come and go and don't really have to respect what they find or leave.

Ultimately, you pay the price for being a quiet person. Many are forced away from the place they love on weekends — to find a little peace. That's ironic enough, but I know people who won't even let their children swim in the lake because of the danger.

It's been getting worse each summer in recent years but the problem has been highlighted in the warm spell we've been enjoying. Complaints have been pouring in to Dick Stephenson, regional director for Shawnigan.

"Last week alone I had 21 calls complaining about boats on the lake," he told me.

Many complain, too, to the RCMP, who patrol the lake regularly during the summer and check up on troublemakers. The other night, the RCMP boat stopped at our float and the driver said he was investigating a report that people were doing some night skiing, which is illegal. And that was after 11 p.m.!

Stephenson, a keen sailor, said ideally he favors an eventual ban on motor boats.

"But at this point, I believe Shawnigan has to be a multi-purpose lake," he added. "The problem of noise pollution can be boiled down to about six large boats and they are a damned nuisance!"

Stephenson favors keeping the lake open to all kinds of boats for the time being but limiting the number of places where weekenders can go and put their boats in. And he goes along with the recommendations of a special planning committee for the area, which is suggesting that power boats be phased out gradually on Shawnigan Lake over the next 10 years.

Two public meetings will be held soon — on the Saturday before the Labor Day weekend and the Saturday after — at the Shawnigan Community Hall to discuss these and other recommendations.

After these meetings, billed as "open houses on the community plan," the committee will prepare a new plan for the area. It's expected to be ready by December.

"Our proposal is that motor boats be phased out over 10 years down to a 5 mph limit, ideally with quiet electric motors being allowed so that elderly people can still get around the lake," said Howard Dixon, chairman of the advisory planning commission for Shawnigan Lake.

Even that isn't good enough for Joan Wachtin, who has drawn up a petition to have motor boats banned now. Citing the danger and the detrimental effect of the drinking water by petroleum-powered boats (most people draw their drinking water straight from the lake), Joan has more than 100 signatures already on her petition, which she is sending to Environment Minister Jim Nielsen.

While there is still some doubt clouding the question of water pollution, there appears to be little to argue with on the danger score as last weekend's boating accident on Elk Lake showed.

Two canoes were swamped by a boat towing a skier and a man almost drowned.

And there's the noise, said Dixon, who admits that the recommendations are aimed at getting fast boats and skiers off the lake. Where will they go?

"They can ski just as easily in the ocean," he said.

But Stephenson didn't agree.

"Debris and things like floating deadheads make it dangerous to ski in the sea, and do we have a right to deprive these people of the use of the lake?" he asked.

Dixon believes they do and he feels, in fact, that's what most of the people want.

"It used to be that more people wanted skiing than didn't," he explained. "But we sense that the mood of the people is changing."

There is no easy answer, but Dixon suggests we look at the rest of Canada for a lead. To places like Quebec, where he said they've banned motor boats on all lakes north of Montreal and where even the use of chain saws is limited to certain hours on lakeside properties.

Being basically a quiet person, one who would rather push a hand mower over an acre than put up with the clatter of a motor, I'm with Dixon when he says:

"Surely, it's a more fundamental right to have the peaceful use of nature than it is to be bombarded."

Water Woes Ease a Bit On Peninsula

Saanich Peninsula homeowners have taken the pressure off themselves — somewhat — by voluntarily cutting their water use.

Jim Cumming, chairman of the Saanich Peninsula Water Commission, said today the problem isn't "quite as desperate" as it was last week when residents were warned they faced cut-off supplies if they didn't conserve.

"I think our warnings have had some effect. People are responding," he said.

Cumming said, however, there can be no relaxation in self-imposed restrictions.

"It's still touch and go. People have to learn to help as much as they can."

By "helping," he means no lawn sprinkling, no washing cars or using water unnecessarily.

"If people would turn on the water only when they absolutely needed it and turned it off when they didn't, the problem would be solved," he said.

Michael Williams, senior design engineer with the Capital Region District, said current consumption, averaging about 2.5 million gallons a day for the three municipalities of Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney is about one million gallons less than it would normally be without restrictions.

"We're just hanging on. It's a critical problem, there's only so much water," he said.

Williams said if the residents fail to respond to the appeal for conservation, the water may have to be cut off for a certain number of hours a day in each municipality.

"We wouldnt want it to come to that but if it does it's a matter simply of supply, then the warnings of shut-offs to the residents would be very short in time."

Residents Help Emily Carr Park

Broadmead Farms Ltd. has enlisted the support of Saanich Municipality and Broadmead residents in developing recreation facilities and pathways in Emily Carr Park at Royal Oak.

Broadmead director Gordon Rolston said today the project, on which three Broadmead employees are working, will cost his company "quite a few thousand dollars".

Saanich's parks and recreation committee Tuesday voted to recommend that $1,500 from the municipality's contingency fund be used on the project.

Rolston said in addition to building bridges and pathways in the two-acre park, there will be adventure playgrounds, fitness activity area and other features.

He said his company has met with Broadmead residents who will donate native plants, rose bushes and give other assistance.

Smoke Detectors Ruled Safe

Ald. John Mika said Tuesday a report from the National Fire Protection Association disproves fears that smoke detectors in homes present a radiation hazard.

The report states residents are exposed to more radiation daily from the sun and watching television.

The report says a person within 10 inches of a smoke detector for eight hours a day during a period of 10 days would not be exposed to as much radiation as on a single flight across the United States.

Saanich's fire department sells smoke detectors at cost to residents. Mika said the department will continue to monitor the situation.

SAANICH OPPOSITION EXPECTED

Elk Lake Ski Ban Proposed

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

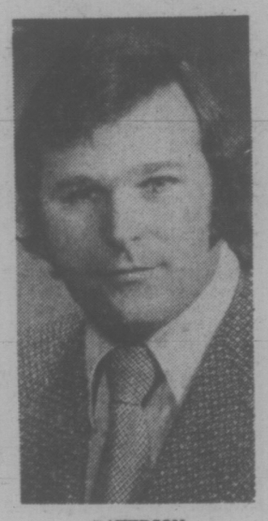
A ban on water skiing and use of aircraft on Elk Lake was recommended Tuesday by the Capital Regional Board's parks committee, but the motion is likely to be opposed by at least the three Saanich regional directors when it comes up for board approval in two weeks.

And even if the board endorses the committee recommendation it wouldn't be a simple matter of enforcing the ban by erecting signs, because there would also have to be approval from the two senior levels of government.

Larry Slaght, regional manager for the federal ministry of transport, said today the federal government is responsible for all navigable waters and there is an established procedure for imposing restrictions on certain types of uses.

If the regional board wanted to prohibit water skiing and aircraft it would have to submit the resolution to the provincial ministry of recreation and conservation for endorsement before the request is conveyed to the federal ministry of transport, he said.

The committee recommendation Tuesday was carried by a three-to-one vote, with only Central Saanich Ald. Dave Hill opposed. Voting in favor of the proposed ban were directors Ron McKenzie (Victoria), Howard Drummond (Colwood) and Pat Massy (View Royal).



PATERSON
. . . he's against it

The discussion was prompted by a letter from water skiing enthusiast Alec Loiselle, 1228 Juno, who had made various proposals for ensuring safer use of the lake by water skiers.

Loiselle, who was at the meeting, said later the committee's attitude "reminded me of the days when the horseless carriage arrived on the scene and the authorities said they're causing chaos, let's get 'em off the streets."

He said it was obvious that the regional directors who voted for the ban proposal have closed minds when it comes to any form of leisure activity involving power.

Cass Schaefer, secretary of the Victoria Aqua-Ski Club, expressed concern about the committee recommendation, but said she expected this kind of action once the regional board assumed responsibility for Elk-Beaver Lake.

She said the club is based on Shawnigan Lake where "right now they are trying to do the same thing to us." If Elk Lake is also closed to skiers there will be nowhere else for them to go on southern Vancouver Island.

Saanich Ald. Dave Paterson, chairman of the municipality's parks committee, said he would urge the Saanich representatives on the regional board to vote against the committee's recommendation.

"I am very distressed to hear this," said Paterson, adding that he believes water skiing can be compatible with swimming and other lake uses.

In any case, he said, he doubts whether the closure could be enforced because the lake comes under the navigable waterway category and is therefore subject to federal jurisdiction.

50-Pointers Irk Saanich

Saanich aldermen want the provincial government to start leaning more heavily on bad drivers.

Ald. Ian Cass, chairman of council's legislative committee, said Tuesday that Chief Bob Peterson already has discussed the problem with superintendent of motor-vehicles R. G. Whitlock.

The committee will recommend Saanich write to Whitlock. The action is expected to be endorsed by council.

"There is evidence in our files that there are drivers in the community with an excess of 50 points who have had two, three and four suspensions," Cass said. "There are some with 10, 12 or 14 traffic violations and convictions that have still been able to re-obtain driving licences in what appears to be quite a modest time."

The committee will recommend that repeaters not be given back their licences for at least four to six months.

Ald. John Mika said Whitlock's actions are dictated by provincial legislation and that political action is necessary to amend that legislation.

"This is an area problem. A bad driver living in Esquimalt can easily drive on Saanich streets," he said.

"There were 10,000 drivers in B.C. with 40 points or more two or three years ago. I think people of that description should wait a dozen years if necessary."

Whitlock said his department is already doing what the Saanich aldermen want, suspending bad drivers for between four to six months and often longer. A suspension, he said, could last for as long as three years.

He agreed that Peterson had spoken to him on the problem but had discussed only one particular case which was already under review by the motor-vehicles branch.

Whitlock said his department is dependent on what local police agencies do.

Yarrows to Need 150 More Workers

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

They're singing Happy Days are Here Again at the Yarrows shipyard as the outlook just keeps improving.

Manpower has grown from a 1976 low of 92 to a level of 550 and about 150 additional employees will be needed starting in October, which will push the total over 700 before year's end.

And 1978 should be even better.

"It looks like we will need 800 employees during most of 1978," Yarrows acting manager George Forbes said today.

"We are pleased in many ways because we feel the shipyard operates at peak efficiency with about 800 workers. We have had as many as 1,200 and as few as 92 since the (Second World) war but 800 is about right."

Meanwhile, the jobs just keep coming in, a dramatic reversal from February when employment fell to 92 and there was nothing in sight but layoffs.

Things turned around with the awarding of a $5 million contract to refit the Provider.

This was followed by a $14.1 million contract to construct a self-propelled log carrier for MacMillan Bloedel.

Ship repair work has also been brisk, including a major contract on a Korean vessel the Yon Eun. While the repair job will employ 120 men for only three weeks there will be advance work on the log carrier to keep them busy after the Yon Eun sets sail.

Steel cutting for the MacMillan Bloedel vessel will begin in October and about 150 people will be hired over a period of weeks starting at that time.

The project is due to be completed by September, 1978. The Provider is scheduled for delivery Nov. 10 of this year.

Meanwhile, the company is optimistic that several other shipbuilding orders are just around the corner.

"We cannot make any announcements at this time because it would be premature but we are very hopeful about several new projects," Forbes said.

About half of them are government and the rest are private enterprise.

Ottawa has been studying several projects for about two years and a decision should be forthcoming within six months, Forbes said.

"If the projects are approved we have been told that some of the work will be coming to the west coast."

Victoria and Vancouver are strategically located to construct vessels for use in northern waters.

In addition, more self-propelled log-carriers will be needed by the forest industry. Orders for these are expected, but not before the present MacMillan Bloedel vessel is completed in 1978.

"This is a feast or famine sort of business and we have had some difficult years. But right now it looks very promising," Forbes said.

"I am told there is no longer any unemployment among welders in Victoria. That is our main problem at the moment. We could use more welders than we have."

ESKS HANG ON; ROUGHIES WIN

Lions Fall One Yard Short

Times News Services

Edmonton Eskimos withstood a desperate fourth-quarter rally by B.C. Lions Tuesday night to gain a share of first place in the Western Football Conference.

The Eskimos stopped a 99-yard drive by the Lions on the one-yard line to preserve a 24-18 victory over the Lions before 26,131 fans at Empire Stadium.

In Regina, Steve Molnar scored three touchdowns as Saskatchewan Roughriders defeated Ottawa Rough Riders 27-17 before 19,216 fans.

In Vancouver, Larry Washington and Jim Germany, the leading rushers in the Western Football Conference, combined to plow through the Lions defence for 204 yards.

The Edmonton win lifted the Eskimos into a first-place tie with the Lions, each with six points. Saskatchewan moved into a second place tie with Winnipeg in the WFC. Both clubs have four points but the Blue Bombers have two games in hand.

The Edmonton-B.C. game was a thriller with the Lions falling just a yard short of victory in the final few seconds.

Trailing 24-18 with 2:26 to play, the Lions moved from their own 10 to the Eskimos two, but the Edmonton defence stopped fullback Jim Harrison on the one yard line with 16 seconds left.

In the first half, Washington and Germany found big holes in the Lions defence and Tom Wilkinson used his short passing game in leading the Eskimos on three long marches.

Washington carried 16 times for 98 yards, while Germany gained 106 yards in 17 carries.

The Eskimos went 59 yards in nine plays the second time they had the ball, capping the drive with Germany's seven yard touchdown.

After Jerry Tagge hit Leon Bright in the end zone to even the score, Wilkinson moved the Eskimos 85 yards in eight plays, including a 17-yard pass to Howard Strickland for a touchdown.

Wilkinson, who was 15 of 21 for the night, later hit George McGowan with a seven-yard touchdown pass to complete another long drive.

Dave Cutler converted all three Edmonton touchdowns and booted a 32-yard field goal, while Lui Passaglia converted two B.C. majors, had one field goal and added a single.

Tagge completed 20 of 36 attempts for the Lions, including a second touchdown pass to Bright, with two minutes to go in the first half.

Ottawa, the defending Grey Cup champion, lost its third game in four starts and remains in the Eastern Football Conference basement with two points.

Saskatchewan coach Jim Eddy was understandably pleased with Molnar's performance and that of running mate Molly McGee, who picked up 45 yards.

"I think the way Molnar played today was a plus thing," he said. "We established a semblance of a running attack and although it needs to be improved, at least we know it's there."

Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster, who said he thought the Riders could run on Ottawa, got things started early after the Eastern Rough Riders were called offside on a Bob Macoritti field goal.

The Riders took the penalty yardage instead of the field goal and Lancaster moved them in for the major, with Molnar crashing across for the touchdown five minutes into the game.

After the teams exchanged field goals in the first quarter, Molnar got enough yards on a third down gamble at the Ottawa five to set up his second touchdown.

Tom Clements got Ottawa going in the second half with touchdown passes to Bill Hatanaka and Larry Cates, but it was his fumble in the final minutes that turned the tide.

Clements, attempting to scramble for yardage deep in his own territory, fumbled the ball and Saskatchewan recovered on the Ottawa 18.

Molnar then went over for his third touchdown of the night and Macoritti added a clinching field goal with seconds left to play.

GEORGE BIGELOW

BIGELOW, THOMPSON ADVANCE IN SENIORS

Only two members of the host club remained alive following the first round of match play Tuesday in the 55th annual Seniors Northwest Golf Association tournament Victoria Golf Club.

Bill Thompson, the medallist and a former winner, downed clubmate Gordon Verley 3 and 1 while George Bigelow tripped Jake Peters 6 and 5 in another all-Victoria matchup.

In other championsip matches, defending-champion Harold Weston of Portland defeated Thomas Green of Seattle, 2 and 1; George Earnest of Tacoma dropped Curly Leclercq of Portland, 4 and 3; Steve Ballinger of Seattle downed Ray Cranston of Victoria, 2 and 1; Erv Parent of Seattle defeated Herm Dahl of Tacoma, 4 and 3; Stewart Cooper of Vancouver ousted Ole Jensen of Seattle, 6 and 4; and Jack Richardson of Vancouver trounced Ken Newbury of Vancouver, 6 and 5.

Quarter-finals were scheduled for today with semi-finals set to get underway at 8:30 a.m. Thursday.

Finals in both championship and flights are set to begin at the same time Friday.

City Athletes Win Bronze; Quebec Holds Games Lead

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Desai Williams of Toronto lost a Canada Games record in the men's 100 metres because of the wind Tuesday but the 18-year-old sprinter took it in stride.

"As long as you get something behind you you're always going to run a little faster," Williams said after flashing down the track in 10.54 seconds, eclipsing the old mark of 10.65. "But losing the record was OK."

Williams's mark stood for 15 minutes before Games officials took it away because of the push he got from a 54-kilometre-per-hour following wind.

Ontario picked up one other win in track and field competition Tuesday, as Mike Forgrave of Barrie, Ont., won the 400 metres, but it remained in second place in the standings for this event. Quebec led with 129 points, Ontario was second with 127.5 and British Columbia third with 124.

Victories in the first two water skiing events pushed Ontario into the over-all Games points lead with 161.5 points. Quebec was second with 158, B.C. third with 131.5, Alberta fourth with 116.75, Manitoba fifth with 69.25, Saskatchewan sixth with 47.25, Nova Scotia seventh with 24.75, Newfoundland eighth with 19.5, New Brunswick ninth with 5.5 and Prince Edward Island 10th with 2.

The day's activities provided a measure of satisfaction for Newfoundland when Gordon Follett Jr. of St. John's won the island province's first individual medal ever in the Canada Games.

Follett, a 19-year-old student, finished third in the 10-kilometre walk won by Rejean Bruneau of Shawinigan, Que., with Hermann Beaulieu of Dolbeau, Que., winning the silver.

Medals in the walk were presented by Follett's father, 39, who still competes in the sport and can boast that his son has never beaten him.

British Columbia improved its standing with two gold medals in track. Theresa Lendardon of Trail won the long jump with a leap of six metres and Sara Neil of Vancouver used a strong kick over the final 200 metres to take the women's 800 in 2:11.2.

Carol Elliott of Edmonton was second in the long jump with 5.80 metres and Marie Deserres of Montreal took the bronze with a leap of 5.61.

Calgary's Kim Jeffery won the silver in the women's 800, finishing in the same time as Neil. Ulla Hansen of Victoria won the bronze in 2:12.2.

Mark Ross of Saskatoon broke a Games record in the pole vault with a leap of 4.70 metres, eclipsing the old mark of 4.50. Mark Bradley of Toronto was second with a 4.70 jump but more misses, and Victoria's Raul Estrada took the bronze with a jump of 4.60.

Becky Sjare of Red Deer, Alta., won the women's shot put with a toss of 13.25 metres while Ann Grainger of Calgary took the silver 12.47 and Bonnie Kindrat of Ridgedale, Sask., gained the bronze with 12.13.

Meanwhile, Brent Fougner of Victoria came close to a medal with a fourth-place finish in the triple jump, only .64 metres behind the bronze medalist and another Victorian, Alan Sheridan, finished seventh in the 100 metres.

Five Vancouver Island athletes were expected to see action today as Debbie Campbell and Judy Tobacco of Victoria qualified for the 400 metre semi-finals and Joanne Rogers of Courtenay qualified for the 100-metre semis.

Louise Herlinveaux of Sidney will compete in the discus and Craig Taylor of Courtenay will be bidding for a medal in the long jump.

In other action, Tuesday, Wendy Barlow and Nina Bland of Victoria picked up tennis victories. Miss Barlow downed Renee O'Brien of St. John's 6-0, 6-0 and Miss Bland partnered Suzanne Matthews of Vancouver for two victories in the doubles, topping Debbie Brown and Joanie Gillis of Nova Scotia 6-1, 6-2 and Marcie Safer and Shawnee-Lynn Turk of Manitoba, 6-1, 6-3.

Tony Burns of Shawnigan Lake failed to qualify for the water skiing final, which turned out to be a family affair. Joel McClintock, 16, of Mississauga, Ont., and his 13-year-old sister Judy won the men's and women's trick golds while their brother Jim finished fifth.

Eric Prall of Winnipeg won the silver and Louis-Rene Belanger of Chicoutimi, Que., the bronze in the men's competition while Marie Houde of Berthierville, Que., edged Toronto's Lisa Sokolowski for the silver in the women's event.

Water polo got under way with Ontario winning two matches, defeating British Columbia 10-9 and Alberta 8-6 while Quebec, the defending champion, swamped Manitoba 15-2.

Quebec remained in first place in women's field hockey with two wins and no losses after beating Alberta 2-0. British Columbia, which played a 0-0 tie with Nova Scotia, and Ontario, which tied New Brunswick 2-2, were tied for second place with one win and a loss apiece. B.C. won this event in Burnaby, B.C., in 1973.

In baseball, Manitoba, a 4-2 victory over Quebec and British Columbia, which defeated New Brunswick 4-2, had records of two wins and no losses.

The first two placings in the men's 100-metre sprint final were a repeat of the semi-final when Williams beat Barriere. But the Ontario runner was less concerned about his opposition than in a knot in his thigh.

"During the season I've been having good times—10.5s and 10.4s—so I was up for the meet and did what I had to do. But after the semis I had a knot in my thigh and I was a bit worried about it. But the coach gave it a rubdown and it was OK."

Bruneau led the pack in the 10-kilometre walk with a blistering pace early in the race and later exchanged the lead with Beaulieu every half lap before pulling away to win handily in 50 minutes, 47.1 seconds.

"I took the lead for a while and after that Herman takes the lead for 200 metres, then back to me again," Bruneau said. "That's because the wind was so strong you'd need the rest."

BALLARD'S PLEASURE SHOWS

NHL Rejects WHA Bids

NEW YORK (CP) — Harold Ballard was all smiles as he strolled casually out of the fourth floor room where he and his fellow members of the National Hockey League board of governors decided not to expand to accommodate six World Hockey Association teams for the 1977-78 season.

Ballard, the owner of Toronto Maple Leafs, had won his war while Ed Snider, president of Philadelphia Flyers and one of the prime NHL backers of an association with the WHA, scowled after losing.

Eleven floors above, the WHA applicants sat in shock but expressed determination to keep their five-year old league going as viable opposition to the NHL. They were annoyed and visibly disappointed.

"But it's a good thing for everybody," said Ballard, who had expressed his unhappiness with the expansion or merger plans in Montreal in early June.

"I won. It was always in the bag. It was very easy."

"Naturally I'm disappointed," said Snider as he strolled to the elevators down the long corridor. "I don't know what the vote was. It was a secret ballot."

Whatever the vote was, and there was some indication that as many as seven governors were against expanding, it was obviously short of the three-quarters approval required for such a plan.

Not all that long ago, it appeared the NHL was well on its way to accommodating the WHA teams. Everyone was told at a news conference in Chicago June 25 that the NHL board had voted to ask its fact-finding committee to pursue negotiations with the WHA with regard to expansion of the NHL by no less than six WHA teams in time for the coming year.

At that time, there appeared to be only one governor—Jack Kent Cooke of Los Angeles Kings—against the merger.

However, the issue was finally decided following a four-hour session Tuesday after the finance committee had examined the applications of Quebec Nordiques, Winnipeg Jets, Edmonton Oilers, New England Whalers, Cincinnati Stingers and Houston Aeros.

"We understand the governors didn't even vote on our applications," said Bob Graham, chairman of the board of the WHA's Winnipeg Jets. "Naturally, we are shocked with this decision. It was unexpected."

"We were told that the board of governoors had adjourned and that there would be no further information forthcoming," said Harrison Vickers of Houston Aeros.

"All we were told is the statement which he gave you. We feel this was unsatisfactory especially after all the work that has gone into this."

John A. Ziegler, the president-elect, told reporters simply that the plan for expansion had failed to "receive the requisite majority."

"Thus any possible expansion for the 1977-78 season has gone by the boards."

The WHA plans to operate next season with eight teams with Birmingham Bulls and Calgary Cowboys likely to be added to the unsuccessful NHL applicants and the WHA trustees have decided to hold an emergency league meeting within the next two days.

Some NHL governors feel the WHA could take legal action against them, however, the WHA people would not say what they might do.

"They will regret this decision," said Harold Baldwin of New England Whalers. "The decision was made by a small group of emotional men, not in the best interests of hockey. We're not going out of business. Now maybe we'll concentrate on getting aggressive."

Another WHA official added: "It's tough to say what we'll do legally. We'll have to study it for the next few weeks."

Fernandez Cut By Dolphins

By The Associated Press

Defensive tackle Manny Fernandez, who helped spark Miami Dolphins to three Super Bowl appearances in the early 1970s, was placed on waivers Tuesday by the National Football League club.

"I never thought I'd smile the day they told me to turn in my playbook," Fernandez said. "I'm sorry the career's over, but it's anti-climactic. I've had a couple of years to think it over."

Fernandez has been sidelined by injuries the last three seasons.

He was given much of the credit for Miami's victory over Washington in the 1973 Super Bowl, having 11 tackles and six assists.

But Fernandez played little after the 1974 season as five career knee operations took their toll. He was on the injured reserve list all last season.

Elsewhere in the NFL, Los Angeles Rams announced that centre Rich Saul, a seven-year Rams veteran and a starter for the past two seasons, has announced his retirement. Saul, 29, had not signed a contract with the Rams and did not report to training camp.

One veteran, running back Brad Davis of LSU, was placed on waivers by the Rams, along with 1976 fourth-round draft pick Jerrald Taylor, a wide receiver from Texas A and I.

Baltimore Colts placed veteran wide receiver Roger Carr and defensive end John Dutton on a list of players who did not report to camp. Veteran defensive back Delles Howell, who signed as a free agent during the off-season, was placed on the club's injured reserve list.

New Orleans Saints placed offensive tackles Milton Butts and Dave Knowles and linebacker Steve Manstedt on the injured reserve list.

Buffalo Bills waived veteran wide receiver Eddie Bell, once a member of New York Jets. The Bills also waived defensive end Ron Pruitt, linebacker Ralph Fisher and tight end Mike Burnop.

San Diego Chargers cut defensive end John Teerlinck and three rookies.

Former World Football League star running back J.J. Jennings, was cut by Kansas City Chiefs along with 10 others.

San Francisco 49ers cut 15 rookies including kicker David Posey from Florida.

Seven players, including veteran guard John Demarie, were waived by Seattle Seahawks. Atlanta Falcons cut veterans Scott Piper, a wide receiver, and offensive guard Walt Brett along with 18 others.

New York Giants cut veteran defensive back Charlie Ford and wide receiver Mike Jones.

Rocks Need Discipline; Burrards Capture Third

A couple of mental lapses on defence and not enough discipline in the blocking assignments on offence is the simple explanation of why the Shamrocks lost their Western Lacrosse Asssociation semi-final game to Coquitlam Adanacs at Coquitlam on Saturday night.

That's the opinion of coach Nirmal Dillon of the Shamrocks in explaining the Shamrocks's 13-10 defeat that tied the best-of-seven series at one game each. Shamrocks won the first game here, 17-7.

"They scored five goals in about three minutes on about six shots in the first period and then got three in about two minutes late in the game," said Dillon, "and that's what beat us. Otherwise our defence played well."

Offensively, the Shamrocks weren't as sharp as they have been lately and Dillon plans to change some of the assignments in the series third game here tonight to get around that problem.

"We missed too many good chances," he explained. "We had about nine or 10 excellent chances when players were in close. Sometimes they just waited too long. We need more discipline on attack."

Shamrocks will be at full strength for the game.

Ron MacNeil has recovered from a bout with the flu which hampered his effectiveness Saturday and no lineup changes are contemplated.

Three third-period goals by Ron Pinder led Vancouver Burrards to a 13-12 win Tuesday over New Westminster Salmonbellies, at Kerrisdale arena and a 3-0 lead in their arena and a 3-0 lead in their series.

It was a come-from-behind victory for Vancouver, which outscored New Westminster 6-0 after a brawl late in the second period emptied both benches and led to the ejection of eight players.

Ward Sanderson, Rico Bellusci, Bryan Aynsley and Bob Holmes were the Vancouver players thrown out of the game, while Al Lewthwaite, Ed Goss, Bill Mosdell and Dave Wilfong exited for New Westminster.

Dave Tasker matched Pinder's three goals for Burrards while Dave Litzenberger scored twice. Singles went to Bill Rawson, Steve Matheson, Mike Smith, Joe Marrello, Bill Foote, Doug Hayes and Dale MacKenzie.

Brian Tasker and Dave Matheson each scored three goals for New Westminster. Wayne Goss scored twice with Norm Leuszler, Ed Goss, Keith Scott, Ken Winzoski and Wilfong adding one each.

SALMONBELLIES LEAD IN JUNIOR SEMI-FINAL

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies downed Coquitlam J-Hawks 13-7 Tuesday to win the first game of their Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League best-of-seven semi-final series.

Jack Fulton led New Westminster with three goals while Mark Tuura added two. Singles went to Shane Spring, Ken Brown, Steve Manning, Gary Lindsay and Mario Govorchin.

Mike Reelie had two goals for Coquitlam while Eric Otterstrom, Wayne McAuley, Jim Alward, Jordy Dean and Dean Gamble added one each.

Hiking Hazard Pamphlet Could Prevent Tragedy

"Each year, thousands of people go out hiking in the woods and mountains.

"And each year, many come back miserable, wondering what they did wrong.

"A handful don't come back at all."

It seems particularly appropriate, in the light of the recent tragedy in Strathcona Park, for the Outdoor Recreation Council of British Columbia to produce a pamphlet full of suggestions on how to take care of yourself while hiking.

"Never go out alone and always leave word of where you are going and when you plan to return."

The large-scale search for a United States resident, lost since July 26 in the vicinity of Flower Ridge near Buttle Lake, was terminated Sunday without finding a trace of the missing hiker.

He took a short cut — alone.

The pamphlet, which was produced with the aid of the Federation of Mountain Clubs of B.C., the Ministry of Recreation and Conservation and the Physical Fitness and Amateur Sports Fund, should be required reading for anyone hiking or backpacking in the province.

It includes sections on hypothermia (exposure) and hyperthermia (heat exhaustion) as well as tips on how to best deal with such things as blisters, bears, ticks, poison ivy and avalanches.

Those pointers on hyperthermia might be especially helpful during this current hot spell.

In addition there is a list of recommended equipment, some sage advice on survival and nutrition and some hints on trail courtesy and ethics.

Alan Carter, co-ordinator for the Outdoor Recreation Council, said the increasing amount of leisure time is fostering an increase in the popularity of hiking.

"It doesn't cost much and good hiking is right at our doorstep," he added.

Anyone wishing to obtain a copy of the pamphlet can send a self-addressed and stamped envelope to: Outdoor Recreation Council of British Columbia, 1606 West Broadway, Vancouver, V6J 1X7.

Individual copies are free and bulk quantities are available at a cost of $3 per 100.

For the beginning or even semi-experienced hiker or backpacker who sticks to trail systems, the 24-cent investment in stamps to obtain this knowledge could be a lifesaver.

NIBBLES—Although four brands of insect repellent, three brands of suntan lotion and diesel oil produced little effect on the breaking strength of monofilament fishing line in recent labratory tests, the strength of the knots was reduced from five to 10 per cent in some cases . . . This was the result of a reduced ability of the line to resist cutting into itself . . . So next time, simply wipe your hands after applying any substance to your skin or fiddling with the engine on your boat . . . Maybe then, that "big one" won't get away. . . .

Some application deadlines for certain limited-entry hunting seasons in British Columbia have been extended . . . The original deadline was July 22 . . . 'Go-Go' Sox 'Going . . . Gone'

By The Associated Press

The baseball team representing Chicago's South Side is a far cry from the fleet-footed gogo White Sox who last won the American pennant in 1959.

This year's crew of mashers has forsaken the go-go-go for going-going-gone . . . as in home run.

"They attack the ball—it's a case of having six or eight men in a row who can hit the ball out, so they can't walk anybody to get to someone else," manager Bob Lemon said Tuesday night after the Sox hit six home runs in mauling Seattle Mariners 13-3.

The six homers gave the Sox a club-record 144 for the season, erasing the 138 powered by the 1961 and 1971 teams.

Eric Soderholm belted two and Chet Lemon, Oscar Gamble, Jim Essian and Royle Stillman hit one apiece. Soderholm's pair of two-run shots marked the 10th time this season a White Sox player hit two homers in a game, another team mark.

"We haven't exploded for a while," said manager Bob Lemon. "I was hoping we could put together some offensive attack. I didn't think it would be this wild. You never expect to get six in one game. It could be infectious."

In the only other games, Toronto Blue Jays beat Minnesota Twins 6-2, Baltimore Orioles downed Cleveland Indians 3-1 and Milwaukee Brewers shaded Detroit 6-4 after the Tigers took the opener of the twi-night doubleheader 4-2.

"We're definitely a better team than we were two months ago," said manager Joe Torre after his New York Mets beat St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 in a National League game.

Part of the Mets revitalization has come not only from players acquired in the Tom Seaver deal with Cincinnati, but also from within the team. The dispatch of Seaver enabled the Mets to dig out some diamonds in the rough among the pitching staff.

One of them, Nino Espinosa, continued to shine Tuesday night with his consistent work, pitching an eight-hitter for New York.

In other National League games, Chicago Cubs beat Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1, Cincinnati Reds blanked Los Angeles Dodgers 4-0, San Diego Padres whipped Montreal Expos 8-3 and San Francisco Giants beat Houston Astros 4-3 and 5-0 in a twi-night doubleheader.

WORLD RUGBY MATCH IN SOUTH AFRICA

PRETORIA (Reuter) — The final list of 24 rugby union players from 10 countries who are coming to South Africa for a match between a world team and a Springbok side was announced Tuesday.

Professor Fritz Eloff, president of the Northern Transvaal Rugby Union, said no international players invited had withdrawn because of political objections to playing in white-ruled South Africa.

"There were some withdrawals for reasons of business commitments and injuries, though," he said.

"The world squad is made up of six players from New Zealand, five from France, three each from Wales and England, two from Fiji and one each from the United States, Argentina, Australia, Scotland and Ireland.

The international squad will play a South African national side on Aug. 27 to mark the expansion of Pretoria's Loftus Stadium.

Wilkin Puts Seaboard Third; Harris Named Most Valuable

Barry Wilkin tossed a three-hitter Tuesday to lead Seaboard Construction to a 3-2 decision over Victoria Athletics in the final regular schedule game of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League season at Central Park.

The win moved Seaboard into third place, two points behind Athletics.

Brian Grexton hit a two-out double to drive in Scott Sinclair, who had reached base on an error, to give Seaboard a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Mike Taaffe, who doubled to lead off the third inning, scored what proved to be the winning run on a groundout by Sinclair.

Meanwhile, league-champion Sooke Merchants will be represented by five players on the league All-Star team scheduled to face Victoria Bate in an exhibition game tonight at 6:15 in Central Park.

Seaboard and Athletics will each be represented by three players while Ingraham Hotel and Juan de Fuca Builders each had two elected. Colony Inn will be represented by one player.

Bob Harris, Colony's contribution, was named as the league's most valuable player with a 13-6 mound record and a .267 batting average.

Ken Fox of Athletics was named the top pitcher while Pete Rumsby of Juan de Fuca was the leading batter at .460. Norm Goudie of Sooke topped the loop with 35 runs-batted-in.

Juan de Fuca's Rob Coldwell was selected rookie of the year and Lou Vermette of Ingraham captured the sportsmanship award.

In Sidney Men's Association play, Sidney Hotel and Harvey's Sporting Goods played to a 5-5 deadlock before the second game in their best-of-five playoff final was called because of darkness after 10 innings at Sanscha Park.

The game will be completed tonight at 6:15 with the third game set to start immediately after.

Harvey's leads the series, 1-0.

At Hyacinth Park, Lorna McHattie doubled home Laury Grimston in the bottom of the sixth inning to give Colony Motor Inn a 2-1 decision over GSV Combos in the opening game of the best-of-three senior "B" women's playoff.

Sharon Ferrill hurled a two-hitter for the pitching victory.

The playoff continues tonight at 6:30 with the winner advancing to the British Columbia tournament in Kamloops.

In the women's consolation series, Hygrade Radio tripped Victoria Athletics 8-7 in the opening game of a best-of-three final which continues tonight at 6:30.

In an exhibition game, Henry Klat and Jim Tarbuck hit back-to-back home runs in the fifth inning to lead Macdonald men's League All-Stars to an 8-3 win over Heywood League All-Stars at Heywood Avenue Park.

Sverige Tops Test

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Sverige, the computer-designed Swedish yacht, defeated Baron Marcel Bich's America's Cup challenger, France I, by 42 seconds Tuesday in a practice race in light winds on Rhode Island Sound.

A second practice race Tuesday, between Sverige and France II, the Baron's new 12-metre, was cancelled as winds dwindled to five knots out of the southwest.

The round-robin series for challenging yachts ended on Monday, and the semi-finals — Australia vs. France I and Sverige vs. Gretel II of Australia — begin on Thursday.

The American final trials begin Aug. 16.

Greaves Romp In Opener

Greaves Movers opened with a vengeance Tuesday, whipping Farmer Construction 15-2 in the first game of a best-of-three Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League playoff semi-final series at Lambrick Park.

The winner of the series, which continues tonight at 6:30 at the same site, advanced to face league-champion Gorge Hotel.

Greaves and Farmers finished in a tie for second place during the regular season.

Rick Mark hit a triple, a double and two singles in five trips to the plate for Greaves to score twice and drive in four runs.

Ron Arcuri hit a single and a triple to score twice and drive in three runs while Roy Moretti was also two-for-four to score three times and drive in one run.

Multi-Year Pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Defenceman Dave Maloney of New York Rangers, the National Hockey League team's most-valuable player last season, has signed a multi-year contract.

JAZZ ACE MAY RECEIVE TOP SALARY IN SPORTS

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Basketball star Pete Maravich of New Orleans Jazz has agreed to the salary section of a five-year National Basketball Association contract paying more than $700,000 a year, the New Orleans States-Item has reported.

The contract could make Maravich the highest-paid player in professional sports, the newspaper said.

However, a Jazz spokesman said negotiations were incomplete on the contract for Maravich, a guard who led the NBA in scoring last year with 31.1 points a game.

"What we have agreed to were the dollars, but there are eight parts Maravich's attorneys are asking, and the whole thing could still fall through," the spokesman said.

"But I'd say about 60 per cent of the problems have been worked out."

Before last season, Maravich had said he would consider playing out his option with the Jazz so he could join a team that had a chance of winning the NBA championship.

Firefighters Win

LANDER, Wyoming — Victoria Firefighters stayed alive in the losers' bracket of the double-loss elimination Senior Babe Ruth sectional baseball championship tournament by ousting Idaho 4-3 Tuesday.

The British Columbia champions meet Washington tonight with the winner advancing to face unbeaten Oregon on Thursday.

Firefighters trailed Idaho by one run in the sixth inning when Rob Stevens scored the tying run on a sacrifice fly by Tim Crawford and Pat Strandlund came up with a bunt to score Gary White from third with what proved to be the winning run.

Rick Shenton picked up the pitching victory in relief of George Fritz.

Top Cyclists Here Sunday

Approximately 60 of the top bicycle racers in British Columbia will be battling for $1,000 in prizes in a 50-lap race over closed Victoria streets on Sunday.

The "A" and "B" class event, sponsored by Molsons, gets underway from Market Square at 12:30 p.m.

Gordon Head Meets Trail

TRAIL (CP) — Trail, the defending Canadian Little League baseball champions, defeated Prince George 11-8 in two extra innings Tuesday to advance to the finals of the British Columbia Little League baseball championships.

Trail plays Gordon Head of Victoria today and will have to win to force another game against the undefeated island team Thursday. Trail has lost once in the double-knockout, round-robin tournament, so a Gordon Head win today would give them the championship.

Cricket Match Drawn

A Victoria and District Cricket Association President's XI played to a draw with University of California (Los Angeles) in an exhibition match Tuesday at Beacon Hill Park.

Victoria took first knock and reached 145 for nine declared with Dave Gladders scoring 33 and Tony Cox adding 27, not out.

The side from UCLA was then held to 61 for seven with Alec Porter taking four wickets for the loss of only 19 runs.

The visiting side was scheduled to take on another Victoria select team today.

Amateur Field Strong

ANCASTER, Ont. (CP) — It wasn't all hearts and flowers Tuesday as the starting field of 160 golfers began feeling out Hamilton Golf and Country Club for today's start of the 73rd Canadian amateur championship.

The air traffic controllers strike has created a number of problems for competitors, forcing many to seek alternate means of transportation to the championship site.

John Estabrook drove 14 hours non-stop from his Moncton home to ensure New Brunswick's Willingdon Cup squad in the interprovincial team competition had ample time to find the hazards on the 6,750-yard par-70 layout.

"You can bet they were tired when we got here Monday morning at 7 o'clock," said the non-playing New Brunswick team captain who drove the entire distance himself.

Bill Hobbis, a member of the British Columbia interprovincial team, ran into troubles he didn't bargain for when his private plane en route from Prince George was refused landing permission at Seattle.

He had to return to Vancouver, make his way by car to Seattle and connect with commercial flights in the United States. He arrived Tuesday after a $60 cab fare from Buffalo.

Newfoundland golfers, aware of the impending strike, arrived here last week while teams from Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia travelled aboard a special plane arranged for by the Nova Scotia government.

Golfers from Western Canada arrived mainly by U.S. commercial flights through Buffalo.

The first two days of the 72-hole tournament will decide the Willingdon Cup team title with the best three scores of the day from the four-member teams counting toward the final score.

Jim Nelford, the 22-year-old defending champion from Burnaby, leads the British Columbia team in its defence of the team title. Nelford, the individual titleholder in 1975 and 1976, is hoping to use this tournament as a stepping stone to the professional ranks with his last amateur appearance scheduled to be next week's British Columbia Open.

The Brigham Young University star has been golfing consistently in recent months with the exception of an 89 in the third round of the Canadian Open, but he rebounded last weekend to win the Western Open amateur at Benton Harbor, Mich., the first foreign invader to win that tournament.

And the man he beat there, Rafael Alarcon, the 19-year-old Mexican champion, is expected to be his chief nemesis here.

Nelford beat Alarcon in sudden death to win the 1976 Canadian championship played at Victoria's Royal Colwood Club.

The fact the young Mexican has been his closest rival in the two tournaments in which they've met doesn't bother the British Columbia youngster.

Besides Alarcon, Nelford is expected to get stiff opposition from such tournament-wise Canadians as Keith Alexander of Calgary, Vancouver's Doug Roxborgh, Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., and Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont., along with American veterab Dick Siderowf.

Forbes New Boot-Bunging Champ

LONDON — Britain has regained the world Wellington boot throwing record, which it lost to Finland last year. Gordon Forbes, 34, a farmer from Buckie, Banff, in Scotland, hurled a Wellington boot 166 feet, trammelling the record set by Finland's Pentti Veijola in 1976 by 21 feet.

LOS ANGELES — A major motion picture sequel to Roots is being planned, set in the post-Civil War era in Henning, Tenn. Academy Award-winning writer Edward Anhalt will do the screenplay, which will be based on material from Alex Haley's book and from additional material Haley is writing. Called Roots: The Next Generation, it will continue the story from the television series of Chicken George and his son, Tom. The main story revolves around Tom, a freed slave, and an aristocratic white landowner, set against the turmoil of Reconstruction. After the theatrical release ABC will air another television continuation of the story of the Haley family.

LOS ANGELES — Lassie, that indestructible canine of the movies and television, will return to the big screen with James Stewart. The new Lassie movie will be the first in 26 years, the last being The Painted Hills in 1951. Academy Award-winning composers Richard and Robert Sherman have written the original story and score, as well as a number of songs. Rudd Weatherwax is again providing Lassie, using a descendant of the original canine star.

NEW YORK — Democratic mayoral candidate Bella Abzug says she'll make New York City "irresistable" to film and television producers. "If I am mayor, I'll see to it that New York, like Hollywood, like London, is a film and TV capital of the world," the former congresswoman told a reception given in her honor by film producer Robert Stigwood. Mrs. Abzug said she would make the city "irresistible to film and television projects," adding, "expanding production would give an enormous boost to the entire city economy." She said she would raise the status of the city's film office by making it an autonomous unit with its own budget and she would personally travel to Hollywood to lure movie and television productions here.

HOLLYWOOD — Actress Brenda Vaccaro announced Tuesday she will file for a divorce from her husband of three weeks. Miss Vaccaro, 35, was married July 20 to William Spencer Bishop, 35, her second marriage. The wedding took place in Oklahoma, where she is filming Moonbeam Rider. A spokesman for Miss Vaccaro said the actress has separated from Bishop and will soon officially file divorce papers. No grounds for the divorce were disclosed.

HOLLYWOOD — Singer Vikki Carr has entered the Methodist Neurosensory Centre in Houston "for observation of a bruised vocal cord." Dann Moss, her manager and former husband, said Tuesday the throat ailment developed after "an exceptionally heavy eight months of concerts" throughout Asia and latin America. The soreness worsened in Omaha last week, causing her to cancel an appearance in Denver, Moss said. He said she is expected to recover in time to keep a Las Vegas engagement late next week.

LOS ANGELES — Actor George Kennedy has separated from his wife, Revel, to whom he has been married for 18 years. "It has been coming for a long time," Kennedy said Tuesday. "Strictly a matter of incompatibility that has steadily increased — I won't say anyone is to blame," The Kennedys have a daughter, 15, and a son, 11.

LOS ANGELES — The Captain and Tenille music-comedy act is suing a merchandise house for $80,000 for advertising a wig as a "Tenille" style. The team, Daryl and Toni Dragon, charged Tuesday that the offering by the Spiegel Co. of a wig under Mrs. Dragon's professional name invaded their privacy and violated their trademark rights. They asked $80,000 in damages.

CAMBRIDGE — Lord Adrian, a Nobel Prize winner who pioneered the modern study of th body's central nervous system, has died at the age of 87, his family said today. Adrian, who held virtually every top scientific and educational post and honor in England, died Thursday

A Life Of Luxury On $12,000 A Year

WASHINGTON — It wasn't the stealing that drew the attention, it was the spending.

First there was the new car, followed quickly by several more spanking new autos — one of them a $35,000 Lincoln Continental.

Then there was the new $60,000 house with swimming pool, a houseboat, a $75,000 topless bar a block from FBI headquarters and other property.

His neighbors were getting pretty suspicious of William Sibert.

After all, Sibert, a transportation department office worker was paid just $12,000 a year.

Co-workers, many of whom were treated to lunches by Sibert, began wondering too. Where was all the money coming from?

Tuesday the government supplied some answers. Sibert, the FBI said, was arrested Friday in Las Vegas on charges of embezzling $850,000 in government money. Investigators say that Sibert got the money by diverting more than $850,000 in transportation department cheques earmarked for the Atlanta subway system, to his personal account in a Maryland bank.

UFOs for Israel?

CAPE MAY, N.J. — Robert Barry says he's convinced Israel's military success against the Arabs has been due to divine intervention, most notably through the use of unidentified flying objects (UFOs).

"I believe that godly or angelic pilots of UFOs could be on the side of the Israelis," says Barry, 55, a radio advertising manager and director of the 20th Century U.F.O. Bureau.

Barry, whose group is sponsored by fundamentalist radio preacher Dr. Carl McIntire, said every time there has been a Middle Eastern war there have been world-wide sightings of UFOs.

He said secret Israeli and U.S. reports show that Israeli troops were saved during the 1967 war by "miracles" when UFOs were reported over the battlefield.

Once, a sudden whirlwind in the Sinai exposed Egyptian land mines to the Israelis, he said. In another case, thousands of Egyptian soldiers surrendered to 100 Israelis after the Arabs had visions of thousands of Israelis and hundreds of tanks.

A Holiday For Murder

LONDON (NYT) — Murder will strike again on the Orient Express.

The celebrated train, long synonymous with intrigue and romance, is being revived by a London travel agent who has quietly begun to offer an 11-day round trip to Istanbul on which the 150 passengers are invited to imagine themselves Hercule Poirot, Agatha Christie's famous detective.

A murder will be staged by an accompanying dramatic group, which will remain aboard to play their roles and answer questions about the crime. The best sleuth gets back his $1,540 fare.

The trip aboard a chartered French Railways train is designed with nostalgia buffs in mind, particularly well-heeled Americans. The travellers all must wear clothes of the 1920s, the heydey of the Orient Express.

Each passenger on the revived train will be given a portfolio containing a sketch of each of the characters in the plot — army officer, model, doctor, racing driver, archaeologist, movie star, maid and, of course, a detective.

The cast will remain in character for the whole journey except during the stopovers in Venice, Belgrade, Sofia and Milan, as well as three nights in Istanbul.

The paying passengers will get periodic briefings from the "detective" and they are also free to question the cast at will. The winner is the one who fingers the murderer, but he must interpret the clues correctly while ignoring the red herrings.

The journey is to leave Victoria Station in London Dec. 29. A New Year's party will be held as the 12-coach train rolls from Venice to Belgrade.

The train, which cost $130,000 to charter, will carry a restaurant car, with breakfasts and four-course dinners included in the fare. It also will have a bar car, something lacking on the original Orient Express.

Free Hess—Vance

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance said in a letter made public here Monday the U.S. government favors release of convicted Nazi war criminal Rudolf Hess from Spandau prison in Berlin, where he is the sole prisoner. Hess, 83, is the last prisoner held under the Four Power agreements.

Costly Homes Boom in Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — "Luxury home for sale: 18-room hillside bungalow with river view, 5 BR, 3 baths, two fireplaces, 5,400 sq. ft. indoor pool. Reduced to $345,000."

This ad appeared in the local newspaper in early July and within a week an oil company executive who had been transferred from Montreal bought the home.

He paid cash.

"There's no doubt there are an awful lot of people in Edmonton with an awful lot of money to spend on houses," says Bob McKitrick, a real estate agent whose company has sold several city homes for more than $250,000 in the last few months.

"And with the strong economy here now, a lot of wealthy people will be moving here, making the luxury home market look pretty good."

McKitrick's comment sums up the current sales picture in the luxury homes on the Edmonton market, which now has one of the highest housing prices in the country.

While most houses in the city sell for between $65,000 and $90,000, a small number of homes are being bought by those desiring the comfort — and prestige — of a house three or four times as large and expensive as the average.

BATOCHE DAYS CANCELLED

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Back to Batoche Days has been cancelled for 1977 because it is too late in the summer to begin organizing the Metis celebrations.

Although $20,000 was approved by the secretary of state for this year's celebrations, Bud Pocha, director for the West-Central area of the association of metis and non-status indians, said representatives from most association locals felt celebrations would not be successful because the weather is getting very cool.

Ed Keeps 'Em Guessing On Manitoba Vote Date

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer continues to keep Manitobans guessing about when he will call a provincial election.

In his latest comments, he indicated prospects for a September election are dim because he will not go to the polls until he is sure there will not be a federal election.

Prime Minister Trudeau is rumored to be seriously considering an election this fall to take advantage of favorable opinion polls.

A provincial writ for a Manitoba election must be issued 35 days before polling day, which would mean Schreyer would have to announce a September election by August 26.

The NDP premier, who must call an election by next spring at the latest, said Trudeau would have to make up his mind by Sept. 5 for a fall federal election. But Schreyer would not say this means a September election in Manitoba is totally out of the question.

"I am not going to speculate," was his only comment.

Earlier this year, Schreyer blamed the decision by Ontario Premier Bill Davis to go to the polls June 9 for the delay in calling a Manitoba election.

Current speculation in Manitoba is that if September has been ruled out, the provincial election will not come until November or December. October is believed out of the question because there are province-wide municipal elections.

'Otto Won't Spring Cash,' Angry Sask. Grit Claims

REGINA (CP) — John Embury, president of the Saskatchewan Liberal Party, says the provincial wing of the party is having difficulty obtaining money owed to it from a general party fund because of distrust between federal Transport Minister Otto Lang and himself.

"We are in a little battle with Otto to spring some money," Embury said in a telephone interview. Lang could not be reached for comment.

Embury said the "stupid internal fight" centres on a Liberal Party of Canada (Saskatchewan) fund in Saskatoon. He and Tony Merchant, Liberal MLA for Regina-Wascana and Lang's brother-in-law, both claim the fund is ultimately controlled by the transport minister.

Ted Malone, provincial party leader, said virtually all donations to the Liberal Party are channelled into the fund, which he said is controlled by the party and its designated officers such as Lang and himself.

Embury said the fund was established after federal legislation was passed in late 1974 making donations to federal parties tax deductible.

With its establishment, he said, the federal and provincial wings of the party decided to raise money jointly and deposit it in the fund to be divided evenly between the two party wings except in special circumstances such as elections.

But, the provincial president said, neither the provincial wing of the party nor Malone has any control over the fund — "Otto controls the money."

He said Lang "is the political minister in Ottawa for Saskatchewan and his people have got control of the system."

Embury said that because the provincial party wing has not received money from the fund yet this year it has drawn a bank overdraft in the five-digit category. He declined to state the exact amount.

Embrey said he didn't really know how much money is owing the provincial wing from the fund because he has no idea how much money is in the fund.

"Otto has come to the conclusion that I am not his closest friend," Embury said. "I'm assuming the reason the provincial wing can't get money from the fund is that they (Lang's supporters) don't like or trust me."

Embury said that before money is transmitted from the fund "they want some particulars of some donations given directly to candidates in byelections." But, he said, "we have never seen the money through central office down here and we don't know how much money it was."

Tom Molley, the party's federal affairs committee chairman in Saskatchewan, said he is the one who gives authorization for disbursements from the fund. "It's my decision. Otto Lang has nothing to do with it at all."

Molley, a Saskatoon lawyer, is president of Lang's constituency association executive.

Embury said it may be technically correct to say Molley has the authority to release money from the fund but the instructions are coming from Lang and . . . "his people."

Molley and Merchant said that if there are problems with disbursements from the fund they are caused by administrative delays rather than personality conflicts or other reasons.

Merchant said the delay is necessary to ensure party finances are scrupulously recorded.

12-STOREY PLUNGE KILLS EDMONTON MAN

EDMONTON (CP) — Painter Brian Thompson, 32, plunged 12 storeys to his death Tuesday when his scaffolding equipment failed, police said.

Fellow painter Noel Plummer, 20, of Edmonton hung on to apartment balcony railings and pulled himself to safety.

Eyewitness Mrs. Rinske Terheide, 26, said: "I was walking with the kids and I heard this crash.

"I looked over to the building and saw the scaffold coming down. One side of it was hanging lower than the other.

"I could see the rope slowly giving way . . . then it snapped and the scaffold fell to the ground.

"Up above, I saw these two guys hanging from the balcony and at first I thought they were lucky. But then one of them started falling . . . I knew he would be killed."

Mine Workers Raise Concerns Over Safety

THOMPSON (CP) Steelworkers at Inco Metals Co. have asked the Manitoba government for a royal commission inquiry into safety and health standards in the nicel mining industry.

Dick Martin, president of Local 6166 of the United Steelworkers of America, said Tuesday the request was made to mines minister Sidney Green and Premier Ed Schreyer.

Martin said the 2,800-member union has become concerned about the accident rate this year. Five deaths have occurred so far this year at the Thompson operation with more than 400 other accidents recorded.

Martin said the union will present a resolution to the Manitoba federation of Labor Convention in Winnipeg next month, asking the orgaization to "press the province for an inquiry."

The union also is concerned about the possibility that nickel dust in the mill and smelter can cause cancer.

Referring to the 400 accidents, Martin said "this means that about 12 per cent of the total Inco work force have been involved in some kind of an accident so far this year."

The union leader said the joint management-union safety committee established by legislation this year "have been a very positive step, badly-needed and welcome."

A commission, Martin said, should study the influence of production bonuses on the accident rate and see what improvements can be made to controlling loose rock in the mines, a situation that has resulted in two of the four fatalities.

There has been no immediate response from the government to the request inquiry.

STREET DRUG WARNING BY LETHBRIDGE RCMP

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — The RCMP's chief drug investigator for southern Alberta says drugs are easy to buy on the street in Lethbridge and anyone who thinks otherwise is "sticking his head in the sand."

Sgt. Clifford Mashford points to a recent undercover operation in which an RCMP officer cruised four city bars for five days and purchased drugs.

Mashford said pleas for "decriminalization" of pot use in Canada are popular but also misguided and dangerous.

If the use of marijuana was encouraged, trafficking would increase and trafficking often involved other crimes, he said.

Eco-Village Plan For Youth Project

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta's first project under the $7.5-million federal youth project called Katimavik will start in September near here.

About 30 persons aged 17 to 22 will spend 10 months constructing an energy-saving eco-village at a camp 40 miles west of the city, Wayne Zimmer, Katimavik regional supervisor said.

Katimavik — an Inuit word meaning place of meeting — is a federal government project involving 1,000 young volunteers. They receive travel, room and board, $1 a day pocket money and a stipend of about $1,000 at the end of the 10-month program.

Zimmer said the project near Calgary will give young Canadians — both English and French-speaking — a chance "to develop and appreciate the concept of a conserver's society."

He said the participants will strive to create a community using as little energy as possible and will probably build a solar-heated log cabin, windmill electrical systems and greenhouse food stores.

Seven Katimavik projects are allocated for the western region — two each for Saskatchewan, Alberta and B.C. and one for the Northwest Territories.

Zimmer said a second project for Alberta has not yet been determined but community service projects in either Fort McMurray or Slave Lake are being studied for the fall.

Huge Hash Seizure

BONN (Reuter) — West German police seized on Tuesday two tons of hashish worth an estimated $4.25 million on the black market and cracked a Turkish heroin-smuggling ring in raids around the country. Police said 19 Turks and an Algerian were arrested.

CHECK CITIZENSHIP ALBERTANS WARNED

EDMONTON (CP) — Thousands of Alberta residents were advised by the provincial government Tuesday to check their citizenship status before elections this fall, in light of legislative changes passed, without opposition, in May.

The amendment, among several made to the Municipal Election Act, specifies that only Canadian citizens may vote or run for council, previously, British subjects also held electoral rights.

"With the change in legislation, municipaly voter qualifications now coincide with those applicable to school electors and to voters at the provincial and federal levels," said Jack Fleming of the Alberta municipal affairs department.

"Qualifications of candidates for municipal elective office require that such persons must live in Alberta for 12 consecutive months immediately preceding nomination day.

"The residency requirements for voters is six months. Both groups must be 18 years of age and Canadian citizens.

"Individuals intending to vote in October's municipal elections should check their citizenship status — especially British subjects here since 1947, and Canadian British-born women married before 1974 to non-British subjects."

PM Balks at $89,000 Question And Leaves Tory MP 'Bilious'

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "It just makes me bloody bilous!"

That was Ontario Conservative Tom Cossitt;s reaction Tuesday night to an outright refusal by Prime Minister Trudeau to explain what he had done with more than $89,000 used to buy "supplies" for his official residence, 24 Sussex Drive.

"He's hiding something," said Cossitt, a former member of the Liberal Party who has made a career out of uncovering prime ministerial precadiloes since he joined the Tories in 1972.

His question, on the House of Commons order paper since last October, attempted to delve into such things as the cost of renovations, decorating and entertainment at 24 Sussex Drive since Trudeau became its principal occupant in April, 1968.

The replies, however, simply said: "See reply to Question No. 6 tabled this day," a polite brush-off at best.

Question No. 6, also put on the order paper 10 months ago, asked for a complete list of "all items over $100 in value purchased for the prime minister's official residence . . . during 1973-74 under the heading 'supplies' totalling $89,196.53."

The reply, under Trudeau's signature, was six pages long, one of the most extensive offered in recent years, but it didn't answer Cossitt's question.

Instead, it offered a detailed history of all official residences in Ottawa, including Stornoway, the old lumber baron's mansion now occupied by the leader of the official Opposition, and Kingsmere Farm, the House of Commons Speaker's home while he's in office.

It broke down the costs for Stornoway and Kingsmere, but not for 24 Sussex Drive, an attitude Cossitt finds reprehensible and arrogant.

"We're talking about taxpayers' money. It's as good a con job as he's pulled on Parliament in a long time.

"Who's he got out there anyway? Idi Amin and his retinue?"

SOME SECOURS FOR DANSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department is looking for a French equivalent of the word Rescue emblazoned on the side of search-and-rescue aircraft, Defence Minister Barney Danson said Tuesday.

Danson said in an interview the department is considering using the word "secours" which means help, or "sauvetage" which means saving, alongside the word rescue.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said in the Commons he understood the word rescue, which has been an international symbol for search-and-rescue aircraft for 20 to 25 years, is being replaced by a symbol on defence department aircraft.

He suggested the department consider using the derivation of the international distress call "mayday" which comes from the French "m'aider" or "help me."

Danson said he became aware only recently that an order had been issued to use a new colored configuration on the aircraft.

Forum on Controls 'Meaningless Charade'

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's proposal of a consultative forum that would advise federal authorities on economic policy after controls is just a "meaningless charade concocted by uninformed amateurs," Donald Montgomery, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), said Tuesday.

Montgomery, in an interview, also said future co-operation between labor and government would be very difficult to achieve if the cabinet acted on a threat by Transport Minister Otto Lang to take away the right to strike from "essential service employees.

Officers of the CLC's 114 affiliated unions are to meet shortly to discuss the government's conditional offer of an end to wage and price controls.

The meeting, originally scheduled for Thursday, has been delayed until Aug. 17 because of the air traffic controllers' strike.

The consultative forum suggested by the government would include representatives of consumer, agriculture, fishermens' and professional groups as well as business, labor and government officials.

It was one of three conditions proposed by Prime Minister Trudeau in return for an early end to wage and price controls. The other two are a pledge by labor and business representatives to back restraint in their demands on the economy and the setting up of a monitoring agency which would investigate and publicize excessive price and wage increases.

Controls are now scheduled to end Dec. 31, 1978, but business, labor and government have been discussing Oct. 14, 1977; Jan. 2, 1978 and Oct. 14, 1978 as earlier alternatives.

Montgomery said the CLC was standing by its position that controls must be ended before labor considers the government's conditions.

"Our view is that controls have been harmful to the economy from the beginning and are more harmful now than ever."

BOSSES RUNNING MILL

MONTREAL (CP) — Robin Hood Multifoods Ltd. has reopened its mill here with supervisory workers once again doing the work of the strikers, company president Logan Brown said Tuesday.

Brown told reporters the company will eliminate 50 jobs at the mill even if a six-month strike by 150 mill workers is resolved.

Production, now at about 50 per cent of capacity was halted and the mill closed July 22 after eight strikers were shot during a demonstration organized by the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU).

Brown told reporters he did not expect the company decisions to affect negotiations now under way to end the strike. Robin Hood is scheduled to answer the latest union demands at a meeting Thursday.

But CNTU officials branded Brown's statement as "a scandalous provocation" to the strikers.

"If this is Robin Hood's answer to union demands, the CNTU shall use all means to stop work at this company which literally mocks its workers," the federation said in a statement.

Some of the same private security guards who were on duty the day of the shooting are back at the plant, but with strict orders not to use firearms, Brown said.

Brown repeated the company's contention that the strike—which began Feb. 2 to protest an anti-inflation board rollback—is illegal and Robin Hood was within its rights to hire security guards to protect company property.

The CNTU said the strikers asked Robin Hood to accept terms similar to those agreed to by the other mills, which call for the money lost in the rollbacks to be diverted to the workers' pension fund.

The Robin Hood strikers are also demanding compensation for the shooting victims, although Brown said both sides agree the money should be paid by the security firm.

No Pipeline Aid, Trudeau Vows

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday no government money will be provided for construction of a northern natural gas pipeline.

"We do not intend that the Canadian taxpayer should pay for it in any sense," the prime minister said in reply to questions from James Gillies (PC— Don Valley).

The government gave provisional approval Monday to construction of a $10-billion pipeline by Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. of Calgary to move Alaskan gas across the Yukon, British Columbia and Alberta to the U.S. border.

But any final approval of the project will depend on negotiations with the U.S. on such issues as the routing of the line and compensation payments to the Yukon for its social and economic impact.

Gillies asked for assurances that the government will not provide any financial arrangements to guarantee completion of the pipeline for moneylenders.

"If the question is stated in that way, the answer, and I gave it yesterday at the press conference, is unequivocally no," Trudeau said.

The Conservative MP also pressed the government for assurances that it will insist in talks with the U.S. that the pipeline cut deeply into the Yukon interior.

That route was suggested by the National Energy Board on the grounds that it would make it easier to construct a connecting spur line into the Northwest Territories if needed in the 1980s to move Canadian gas to market.

But Trudeau said the route still is open to negotiation and chastised the Conservatives for suggesting a list of non-negotiable items to take to Washington, saying if they were followed there might not be much point in opening talks with Washington.

Hog Subsidy To Process Outside B.C.

The provincial government will give a $2-a-hundredweight subsidy to hog producers who ship their product outside B.C. for processing in a federally-inspected plant, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Tuesday.

Hewitt told the legislature the government move, in addition to the recent federal certification of a slaughterhouse in Abbostford, will alleviate the problem producers have been facing.

The Abbotsford plant joins two other federally-approved operations, which producers have complained are insufficient to handle their processing needs.

Producers have had to send their hogs out of B.C. for processing and they were complaining that the high costs involved could shut some of them.

Hewitt said the problem still hasn't been totally resolved, but his ministry is in close contact with industry officials and a long-term plan is being worked out.

A version of popular sweet 'n sour chicken

Hawaiian Chicken Bake Easy

Mary Moore

By MARY MOORE

Maureen has been in Hawaii and says the chicken recipe I am about to give you reminds her of a sunny Hawaiin morning.

It has many features: it is sunny gold in color; you can use a cut-up frying chicken or about five breasts; it has the popular sweet 'n sour flavor and most important to many of us is easy.

HAWAIIAN CHICKEN BAKE
(Serves 5)

One 3¼ to 3½-lb. frying chicken cut up (OR 5 large breasts)
2 tbsp. margarine
1 cup crushed pineapple, drained
3 tbsp. prepared mustard
¼ cup honey
¼ cup sherry or white or Rose wine
½ tsp. salt
paprika (for sprinkling top).

Arrange chicken pieces or breasts, skin side up, on shallow greased pan. In a pot melt the margarine and stir in the drained pineapple, mustard, honey, sherry and salt. Spoon this sauce evenly all over chicken pieces. Sprinkle sparingly with paprika. Bake at 350-deg. F. for 45 minutes until tender. If desired, five minutes before baking time is up raise pan to about four inches below preheated broiler burner to brown a little more and to crispen skin.

When Maureen tested this she served it with new boiled potatoes and peas and Don declared it "a lovely meal."

NOTE: Obviously the Hawaiian Chicken Bake may be prepared in the cool of the morning and refrigerated. One hour before mealtime, remove from refrigerator to room temperature while oven preheats to 375-deg. F. then bake as above.

MIRACLE DIETS HEALTH HAZARDS

MONTREAL (CP) — Miracle diets are hazardous to health, and some are rackets, says an association representing dietitians in private practice.

Any diet that recommends restricting calories to less than 800 a day can cause health problems, Helene Tremblay, chairman of the Association of Independent Dietitians of Quebec, told a recent news conference.

The group was responding to publicity for a new 500-calorie diet recommended in a book of gourmet recipes for slimmers.

The dietitians also condemned fasting with the assistance of predigested protein, dieting with hormone injections and another program that uses pictures and subliminal messages to induce food revulsion.

None of these approaches has been effective in achieving permanent weight loss, said Miss Tremblay.

The picture-and-message system, while not dangerous to health, is a waste of money because it is adapted from a United States program and is not based on Canadian dietary habits, she said.

Restricting food to a liquid protein supplement can lead to loss of blood sugar, reduction in blood pressure or dizziness, she said.

Dietitians are particularly concerned about diet plans that involve injections made of thyroid hormones, diuretics to increase urine flow and amphetamines. Miss Tremblay said medical studies have indicated these may be harmful.

A high-fat protein regimen also came under fire because the association said elimination of carbohydrate — required by the diet — can harm the blood-circulation system.

People on fad diets — mostly women — should not cut their daily caloric intake below 1,000, she said. But they could live on only 800 calories a day for up to two weeks provided "their diet is balanced and they eat everything." Men, however, need at least 1,300 calories a day.

For Every Fat Man ... Two Fat Women

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — For every fat male there are two fat females, and wherever there is a chubby wife, chances are there is a slim husband. There are exceptions, of course, but two University of Western Ontario researchers who have been looking for ways to help women rebalance the obesity scales say those are the general facts.

"There probably are twice as many obese women as there are obese men in Canada," said Gary Weisz, a Victoria Hospital psychologist and clinical lecturer in psychology at Western.

Canada is one of the least fit countries in the world, and women between the ages of 20 and 30 are the major contributors to that dismal statistic, he said.

Sheryl Herman, a master's degree student in clinical psychology, is starting a second phase of a study begun a year ago by Weisz when he studied two groups of obese women participating in a weight-reduction program. One group attended on its own, the second attended with husbands.

Wives who had their husbands with them lost slightly more weight during the course, and they also managed to keep their weight down better in the months following the program.

In addition, those women went away feeling better about themselves — actually a measure of their reduced depression — and felt better about their marrigges than did the women who attended alone.

Miss Herman will be taking the study a step farther. She intends to insitute a weight-reducing program involving husbnds attending with their wives again — and this time the experience is to be made "as rewarding as possible" for both husband and wife, but she prefers not to reveal how.

She said emphasis in all weight reduction programs has always been on taking pounds off.

"But we are obviously lacking in what happens after the program is over," she said, noting the statistics on people keeping their weight down once they have lost it are terrible.

Estimates are that of 100 people who lose weight, only five will have stayed trim after five years.

The program's objective is to help wives lose weight and learn new habits designed to keep pounds off in the future. Weisz said, "You can do almost anything and get people to lose weight, but almost nothing you do will get them to keep it off in the long run."

He said the feeling is that husbands have an influence on their wives' weight control efforts. They can either sabotage their wives in subtle or direct ways, or they can assist them — if they want to help.

New Stilton Cheese Factory

HARBY, England (CP) — A new cheese factory producing Stilton, one of Britain's most distinctive regional cheeses, has been established at this Leicestershire town.

Using up to 90,000 gallons of milk a week from local farms, the factory carries on a 300-year-old traditional craft on a large scale with modern technology and facilities. The £2-million ($3,600,000) factory was custom-built to provide the combination of temperature, humidity and other factors needed to produce the cheese, which will be marketed under the brand name St. Ivel.

Stilton can officially be made only in the Midland counties of Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire or Derbyshire under a trade mark diligently preserved by the Stilton Cheese Makers Association.

Output from the new factory will be exported frozen to ensure that it arrives at overseas destinations in peak condition.

David Gerhardt, senior product manager, said: "Although Stilton accounts for only two per cent of total United Kingdom cheese production, and at present less than 10 per cent is exported annually, there is enormous potential for overseas sales." He said North and South America, Germany, Scandinavia, Singapore and South Africa are already importing St. Ivel Stilton.

Biscuit Mix: Ready for Guests

hilda beastall

The pleasure from having unexpected visitors can be genuine if a supply of homemade Biscuit Mix is stored in the refrigerator. A small thing perhaps, but it affords a measure of confidence in being able to produce good food at a moment's notice.

With the addition of blackberries, peaches or apricots, an oven baked dessert will be ready within minutes; add an egg and some dried fruit, you have a batch of Hermits; cheddar cheese and an egg, you have Crusty Cheese Scones for rounding off a splendid salad supper. All these can be made from this one basic recipe.

Putting the biscuit mix together may take a quick worker 20 minutes; a slower worker can do it in 35 minutes if no interruptions.

The reason for making this basic mix at home is to enjoy better nutrition at less cost.

The mixture of flours that I use gives flavor and substantial texture. Other combinations can be tried and used as a change for another batch to have ready for later use.

The quantity can be doubled throughout the Basic Biscuit Mix recipe by homemakers able to handle the mixing of a larger quantity. I find the 4 cups my limit. The total comes to about 5½ cups to put away in the top of refrigerator freezer.

BASIC BISCUIT MIX

2 cups wholewheat flour
1½ cups unbleached flour
½ cup soy flour
¼ cup wheat germ
2 Tbsp baking powder
1 tsp salt
½ cup skim milk powder
¾ cup soft margarine

As usual with baking powder, level the spoon with a knife so that no more than minimum amount is used.

Sift flours, baking powder, salt and milk powder into a bowl to mix well. Cut in the margarine with two knives until mixture has a fine crumby texture.

Although the margarine is called "soft" this refers to the type as specified on the package not the condition when used.

For the purpose of making this recipe, the margarine should be firm — just taken from the refrigerator.

Transfer the mixture by cup into a clean plastic bag. There will be about 5½ cups. Twist down the bag top to exclude air, and place bag in a covered rigid container. Store either in freezer section or on refrigerator shelf.

I label the container with contents and the date, otherwise I would never know in a few weeks what kind of mix it might be.

To make an unusual dessert without oven use, here is a quick Steamed Berry Pudding. Other summer fruits can be substituted and the same recipe will make an oven baked pie.

The finely chopped angelica leaf is from a garden herb which reduces acidity of fruits when cooked, thus lessening the need for sugar. It is not a sweetener.

STEAMED BERRY PUDDING

Fruit Filling:

3 cups berries
2 tsp chopped angelica leaf
2 Tbsp sugar

Cook together gently 3 minutes in 6-inch pan with tight lid.

Top Crust:

1½ cups homemade Basic Biscuit Mix
1 tsp sugar
Water to mix

Mix with fork, adding water a few drops at a time, just enough to make a dry yet soft dough.

Pat out the dough to fit over the hot fruit in the saucepan. Cover with tight fitting lid and cook at gentle simmer for 20 minutes without lifting lid. A lid which fits inside the pan rim will prevent boiling over; listening closely tells if boiling.

Serve hot by cutting into 4 or 5 servings, with fruit spooned over the crust on the plates.

This is a real time and power saver, and useful for folks who use top heat only.

To make an oven pie, just leave out the pre-cooking of the fruit. Spread the crust over the fruit and bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C. until crust is lightly browned.

Crusty Cheese Scones will bake at the same oven heat or a little higher if you check both against scorching.

CRUSTY CHEESE SCONES

1 small egg
½ cup water
1½ cups Basic Biscuit Mix
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese
1 Tbsp softened margarine

Put water in measuring cup, add egg, beating with fork. Add this mixture to the measured Biscuit Mix in a bowl, together with grated cheese. Mix only enough to blend.

Spoon into a greased pie plate, levelling top with fork, then dipping fork into softened margarine to go all over the crust lightly.

Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C. or a little higher for about 30 minutes or until clean knife comes out clean and top is browned. Serve warm or cold, sliced in wedges.

Hermits, as most homemakers know, can be varied just by adding another kind of dried fruit, or by adding a tablespoon of carob powder which gives somewhat the taste of chocolate without the heavy sweetness associated with both cocoa and chocolate.

These Date Hermits are quickly made with the use of Basic Biscuit Mix.

DATE HERMITS

¼ cup soft margarine
2 Tbsp sugar
1 small egg
¾ cup water
½ cup chopped dates
2½ cups Basic Biscuit Mix

Cream margarine with sugar in a bowl. Add egg and beat with spoon. Add water and mix again well. Stir in the dates. Then stir in the Biscuit Mix until barely combined.

Spoon in mounds on greased cookie sheet.

Bake in moderate oven 190 deg. C. for about 10 minutes. Makes about 36 hermits.

Why not take a bagful of Basic Biscuit Mix to the summer cottage or to use at a motel where you might be staying? Then you have the best of two worlds — homecooked food and a holiday.

CABBAGE ROLLS

Good eating this month includes cabbage. Thrifty shoppers will be quick to take advantage of the garden fresh new cabbage at their local markets say Food Consultants with the Food Advisory Division of Agriculture Canada.

Cabbage has long been a familiar standby when served as a salad or a vegetable accompaniment to a meal. The Food Advisory Division of Agriculture Canada have elevated cabbage to the status of a main dish with their recipe for cabbage rolls.

CABBAGE ROLLS

1 cabbage (about 4 pounds)
1 cup finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat
1 pound ground beef
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 cups cooked rice
2 cups tomato juice
2 tablespoons margarine

Core cabbage. Remove and save coarse leaves. Almost cover cabbage with boiling water. Cover and simmer until leaves are soft and almost transparent (about 20 minutes). Remove whole leaves and if necessary continue simmering until all leaves can easily be removed. Split large leaves in half removing centre rib.

Saute onion in fat until transparent. Add beef and brown. Drain off excess fat. Combine seasonings and rice with beef. Place ¼ cup filling on each cabbage leaf. Fold rib side of leaf over filling; fold ends in and roll up to enclose filling.

Place some coarse leaves on bottom of baking dish followed by layer of cabbage rolls. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Repeat to make two or three layers of cabbage rolls. Heat tomato juice and margarine together. Pour over cabbage rolls and cover with remaining coarse leaves. Cover and bake at 350 deg. F. until cabbage is tender (1½ to 2 hours). Makes about 32 small cabbage rolls. Eight servings.

Slight Heart Murmur No Cause for Worry

your health

My 7-year-old son went to day camp recently. The doctor who examined him said that he had a heart murmur and thought that we should see a specialist about it. When we took him to our own doctor, he said that he knew about the murmur, but since it was unimportant he hadn't wanted to worry us. Shouldn't we have been told about this a long time ago? — Mrs. T.G.

Dear Mrs. G.:

The decision as to whether or not to tell the parents about an unimportant heart murmur is one that doctors face often.

Sometimes if he tells the parents about it, even though he explains that this kind of "functional" murmur is of no concern, many people become terrified and almost instinctively limit their child's activities.

Many children have actually been made physical and psychological invalids by the exaggeration of the importance of a slight heart murmur.

If, on the other hand, the doctor tried to spare the parents' anxiety by not telling them about the murmur, there is always another kind of risk involved. And this happened to you when another doctor at camp made mention of the murmur. Sometimes this can destroy the vital relationship between the family and the doctor.

In the daily practice of medicine, decisions of this sort are made by measuring the advantages against the disadvantages of revealing too much to patients. The emotional capacity of parents and their ability to cope with problems are taken into consideration. In most instances, at least one member of the family is taken into the doctor's confidence so that he does not shoulder the entire burden himself.

Now that you know that your child has a murmur, it is imperative that he be protected from that knowledge, and not overprotected, or restricted from all normal, healthy activities and sports.

Many functional murmurs disappear during adolescence. When children have imposed on them constant limitation of activities, emotional scars persist, even after the murmur has disappeared.

So once and for all, you, your doctor and the heart specialist must establish the fact that this type of heart murmur is not a serious one. For there are other heart murmurs, of course, which are associated with all kinds of heart defects. Once these are ruled out, don't make your son a "heart invalid."

I hope he is at camp and having a great time.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH . . . For some unexplained reason, many patients fail to give their dentists a detailed account of their present or past illnesses. This is just as important to the dentist as it is to any other doctor.

Free For the Asking

By HARRIET HART

The 28-page Your Heart And How To Live With It is the condensation of a most helpful book written by Dr. Lawrence E. Lamb.

Dr. Lamb stresses that everybody can do something to prevent the likelihood of having a heart attack. Studies have shown that even minor changes in the diet and with only some people giving up smoking, the number of heart attacks decreased to half the number that usually occur.

Most people who try to prevent the accumulation of dangerous body fat, abstain from smoking, eat properly and engage regularly in moderate exercise are less likely to have a heart attack before they are 65. The author also points out that men who disregard these principles of sound living have an increasing risk of a sudden heart attack after they are 35. More than one out of two die from the first attack.

The main cause of heart disease is atherosclerosis — an accumulation of fatty material in the walls of the arteries. Dr. Lamb explains how those fatty deposits get there. Atherosclerosis can not only result in sudden death, its complications can also cause a person to have a stroke, be crippled for years or become hopelessly senile. Therefore, it is up to everyone of us to do our best to avoid becoming physically dependent on others in old age.

Mini-Lab Visits Stores

MONTREAL (CP) — There's a new green-and-white camper travelling the highways and byways of Quebec, containing a microscope, two incubators, a refrigerator and colony counter.

The mobile mini-lab will permit the sanitary inspectors for Steinberg's food stores to better monitor sanitary conditions in the chain's 142 outlets across the province.

The mini-lab is believed to be the first of its kind in Canada.

"The lab will allow us to check over 350 strategic inspection points in each food store," said Jean-Roch Vachon, director of store services. "As well, it will increase the efficiency of the disinfecting equipment."

Refrigerated samples from each store will also be transported to the chain's main laboratory for further analysis.

Specialists will be able to perform two types of tests on 5,000 samples from the meat department, the area of greatest concern.

Plans call for each store to be visited at least five times a year.

Water the Best Thirst-Quencher of All eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

A distinguished judge of our acquaintance pigeon-holed us on the street one day remarking that he'd heard us praising water as the very best drink in the summer. "What," he charged, "is wrong with good old Crown Royal or Chivas after a long hard day in court ? There's nothing better!"

With respect, Your Honor, each has its place in the scheme of things, but water has a greater value in terms of our body functions. With the hot weather, outdoor living and sports, we lose a lot of water through perspiration. The body compensates by triggering a switch in the brain that tells us we are thirsty, and we unconsciously reach for a drink.

But which drink is best? We are not talking here about the ability of a beverage to give a transient refreshing feeling, but how well it meets the body's need for water and quench thirst. The presence of alcohol or sugar in any beverage reduces its efficiency in quenching thirst. The body uses water to metabolize sugar, alcohol, or, for that matter, protein or fat. Plain simple water is still the most effective thirst - quencher of them all. It is also the cheapest and what's more, it is calorie-free.

Some foods can slake out thirsts as well. Fresh fruits and vegetables, particularly, are full of water and make excellent thirst quenchers. For example, cucumber, watermelon, tomatoes and lettuce are 95 per cent water.

That's even more water than what you get from pop, which is usually 90 per cent water. Yet most people would rahter have a soft drink or an alcoholic beverage.

In the process of getting more water, they seek sweetness or an altered state of consciousness or perhaps a bit of each. None of these is harmful except when sought to excess. Considering how thirsty we get in summer, it is possible to "drink" to excess without realizing it. This is why it is important that we choose our beverages with as much care as we do our foods.

Consider some of the soft drinks available to us. These are either carbonated like soda pop or non-carbonated like fruit-flavored drinks. Most soda pops will contain about 10 per cent sugar, or about three tablespoons in the standard 10-fluid ounce bottle. That's about five or six times as much sugar as you would normally add to your breakfast cereal or your morning cup of coffee. This much sugar is 120 calories. If you take more than one such drink in the course of the day, you can see how it adds up.

Alcoholic beverages don't fare any better when it comes to calories. A six-ounce glass of wine has about 180 calories, as do most 1¼-ounce hard liquors served with mixes, or a 12-ounce bottle of beer. In addition to the calories, alcohol has a dehydrating effect that increases thirst. Prudence and common sense call for sipping rather than gulping down alcoholic beverages. Many Europeans keep a glass of water handy while drinking or dilute their wine with water.

It all adds up to the fact that when we drink, it is the water in the beverage that our bodies crave.

Pound of Round And S-t-r-e-t-c-h It

Tired of hamburgers? And somehow the meat never seems to stretch far enough to give everybody seconds? For a change, take a pound of ground and stretch it with pasta. The results are fast and delicious.

All recipes can be doubled, so with the same amount of time and energy (yours and the utility) plus double the ingredients you can freeze half the sauce for another day. When filling jars with sauce for freezing, remember to leave head room because frozen food expands.

Go lightly on the seasoning because some herbs and spices don't freeze well. In any case, a pinch of this and that added just before serving gives that special flavor.

Measure drippings and add more butter if needed to make ¼ cup. Stir in, pour smoothly. Add tomato paste and dill. Gradually add water, stirring constantly, and cook until thickened. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Add sour cream, a tablespoonful at a time, stirring constantly. Return meat balls to sauce. Heat, but do not boil, to serving temperature.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

All right, plant students, today's lesson is botanical names of the plants. Why not increase your plant knowledge by adding a few new words to your plant vocabulary?

Euphoriba — (pronounced U-for-bee-a) named after Euphorbus, physician to a king of ancient Mauretania. There are about 1,000 varieties, including annuals, biennials, shrubs, trees and succulents. All exude an irritating milky sap when the stems are broken; a few are poisonous if eaten. Nevertheless some are striking garden plants by reason of their showy bracts arranged around the flowers. The best known example is the poinsettia, which we've been assured and reassured is not poisonous.

Cyclamen — (pronouced Sigh-kal-men) from the Greek Kyklos, a circle, referring to the coiling of the flower stems in some species after flowing — the plants's own method of bringing the seed capsules down to oil level. The valuable house plant is C. persicum.

The following names and their definitions will also help you in your understanding of the plant kingdom:

Acerosum — with stiff needles or sharp.

Adunca — hooked or bent backwards.

Africanus — can you guess? Of Africa.

Albo picta — as if splashed painted with white.

Amoena — (a variety of dieffenbachia) means pleasing or lovely.

Elegans — elegant or graceful.

Drop those names on your friends. Happy growing.

Superb Veal Stew Even in Hot Weather

tiny bennett

In the summer when it is very hot, many homemakers turn away from hot meals in the mistaken belief that the family can get by on salads and other cool-sounding dishes.

This is not true. An individual's nourishment intake doesn't change with the temperature, but remains constant. Salads are enjoyable, and a most welcome addition to any table, but in truth, salads should be made an essential part of every main meal, but never the substitute for a main meal course.

I love salads, and I make one at all meals except breakfast, where I often whip together a fresh fruit salad from whatever is around.

But here I'm writing about a superb stew that may not sound right for hot-weather time, but in fact is superb.

I have seldom written about veal, for the very simple reason that veal in the butcher's shop usually costs an arm and a leg.

However, there is an exception — stewing veal, usually offered at give-away prices. And for reasons known only to the dairy and beef breeders of Canada, just lately there's been some very fine veal stewing meat available on the market at a very good price.

This is the most delicate of all meats, needing the most exacting care in the cooking. Here's how I prepare:

BROWN VEAL STEW WITH MUSHROOMS AND TOMATO SAUCE

Cut 1½ pounds of veal stew meat into bite-sized hunks.

Pour three Tbsp. of olive oil into a heavy-duty skillet and, bringing to high heat, brown the veal hunks on all sides.

Remove the veal hunks to a heavy-duty saucepan, and in the skillet brown one medium onion sliced very thin.

While the onion is browning, toss the veal hunks in the saucepan with one tsp. of salt, ¼ tsp. of pepper, and then two Tbsp. of flour.

When the onion slices are browned, add to the skillet two cups of white wine, stir well in, and then add to the main dish of the veal in the heavy-duty saucepan.

Stir and mix thoroughly.

Add to the main saucepan one Tbsp. tomato puree, ½ tsp. dried basil, ¼ tsp. thyme, two cloves, mashed and skinned fresh garlic, and salt and pepper to taste.

Stir it all in, and let simmer a while.

About 40 minutes before serving, stir into the pot about half a pound of fresh mushrooms.

Mom Doesn't Want Girls Calling Son

DEAR ABBY: Please, please print this for me and all the other mothers who have this problem:

What happened to the good old days when the boys chased the girls? I am the mother of a 17-year-old boy, and I am bothered day and sometimes as late as midnight by girls calling my son on the phone. When I say he's not home, they keep calling. Sometimes when I answer they even hang up in my face.

Abby, boys don't like to be called by girls. I know that the girls my son likes best are the ones who never call him.

I have a 14-year-old daughter and if I ever catch her calling a boy I'll tan her hide.

I hope every girl who knows my son reads this. — MOM

DEAR MOM: There's no excuse for rudeness on the phone, or calling at unreasonable hours, but please don't spoil it for all the boys. Some boys LIKE girls to call them.

DEAR ABBY: I publish a newsletter in which I feature a monthly quote. In searching for a quote I came upon your lifesaving advice in Marquis' WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA. Following your biog-profile were these classic Dear Abby words:

"I have learned the art of enlightened selfishness. If one permits others to waste his time, he will forever be fighting deadlines and working under pressure. When I learned how to say 'no' graciously, life became immeasurably more productive."

After using that quote in my newsletter it occurred to me that you should share that advice with your readers. I'm a faithful reader and I've never seen it in your column.

Thank you, Abby. — JERRY BUCHANAN

DEAR JERRY. Well; now you've seen it. You're welcome, Jerry.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 11 years and have one child, age 9. My husband seems to think all he has to do is pay the bills, go to work, and his obligation as a husband and father is paid in full.

He goes off every weekend and we have no idea where he is. When I ask him, he says it's none of my business. It sounds like he has a woman somewhere.

I went to a marriage counselor and he said, "If you had the trouble most married women have, you'd think you were in heaven. As long as he supports you and your child, doesn't drink, use drugs or hit you, disappearing every weekend is a minor fault. Get yourself a boyfriend and don't complain."

Abby, I don't want a boyfriend. I want my husband home weekends. Am I expecting too much? I'm 29 and he is 33, and this weekend disappearing act has been going on for nearly three years.

Can you help me?— SICK OF IT

DEAR SICK: First, find yourself another counselor. I see nothing wrong with putting a "full-time husband" high on your list of priorities. Your husband's weekends are

SUMMER DESSERT COOL AND EASY WAY

Want to serve your guests a delicious cool dessert that will put an elegant end to your summer meal? Well, here's the solution — cool and creamy Lemon Souffle.

It's so easy to make and because it requires several hours in the refrigerator it can be made the day or evening prior to your dinner. What a great way to avoid the last minute rush of preparation before your guests arrive.

Most souffles require tender care with special attention to mixing and baking time. Not so with Lemon Souffle. Although similar in method to a conventional souffle, Lemon Souffle requires no baking at all. It is prepared by overfilling the souffle dish so the finished souffle rises above the sides of the dish. The addition of gelatine allows the mixture to set picture pretty.

When preparing this souffle the most important step is the beating of the egg whites. After separating the eggs, allow the whites to come to room temperature. This causes the eggs to whip more easily, quickly and to larger volumes than eggs at refrigerator temperature. When beating the egg whites, beat them until stiff but not dry. They should have a shiny, smooth surface and the peaks should be quite soft with only the tips falling over when the beater is withdrawn from the beaten whites.

When folding the egg whites into the sauce, the word to remember is "gentle." Gentle yet thorough folding will insure a light and airy product. So don't be scared to try it. It can't fail.

Whether you serve it as a conclusion to an elegant dinner or just for your family to enjoy, it's always a cool and tasty treat.

COLD LEMON SOUFFLE

2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
1⅓ cups sugar, divided
½ tsp. salt
8 eggs, separated
1 cup lemon juice
½ cup water
1 tbsp. grated lemon rind

Mix together gelatine, ⅔ cup of the sugar and salt in top of double boiler. Combine slightly beaten egg yolks, lemon juice and water; add to gelatine mixture. Cook over boiling water, stirring until gelatine dissolves and mixture thickens, about 6 minutes. Add lemon rind. Chill until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon.

Beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Gradually add remaining ⅔ cup sugar and beat until very stiff. Fold in gelatine mixture. Turn into 10-cup souffle dish with a 2-inch collar. To make the collar, fold wax paper into several thicknesses, 3 inches wide and long enough to go around the souffle dish with generous overlap. Attach to dish with sealing tape, leaving 1 inch of paper around dish to make collar 2 inches high.

Chill souffle until firm. Carefully remove paper collar to serve. Garnish with whipped cream and shaved chocolate or grated lemon rind, if desired.

Mkes 8-10 servings.

GOOD NATURED WINES

'World's First Bona Fide Junk Health Food'

'ICE CREAM WITHOUT GUILT'

By MARIAN BURROS
Washington Post

It's been called "ice cream without guilt" and the "world's first bona fide junk health food." At the rate artificial ingredients have been incorporated into what many manufacturers euphemistically call "frozen yogurt," the latter description probably is more accurate.

Some of the newest frozen yogurts have calorie counts as high as ice cream, and the ingredients that are being added to make them more like ice cream have literally adulterated what was once a simple combination of yogurt cultures and milk.

Not that frozen yogurt was ever just yogurt that had been frozen. In order to keep it from freezing too firm or becoming grainy when it softened, it is necessary to add either gelatin or lecithin, both of which are natural products. Sweetened yogurts, of course, contain sugar and-or fruit.

Not only are there literally hundreds of additives and natural ingredients that can be added to ice cream, but the amount of air that can be beaten into it is substantial. A half-gallon of ice cream can weigh as little as 36 ounces.

Most of the frozen yogurts on the market have live cultures. However, there are plans afoot in the world of food technology to create frozen yogurt without the benefit of any bacteria, either live or dead.

Freezing, according to experts, reduces the number of bateria by 10 per cent. The remainder revive once they warm up and hit the stomach. The live bacteria are considered useful for certain physical conditions, even by the most conservative of the medical profession.

Patients on antibiotics, which kill friendly bacteria in the stomach, are told to eat yogurt to put some of those bacteria back into the digestive tract. Frozen yogurt is probably the most palatable way to do so for Americans, who collectively have one of the greatest sweet tooths in the world. But those who eat it are getting a lot of calories in the bargain.

While even the sweetest fruit-flavored yogurt is no more than about 23 calories per ounce, frozen yogurt begins at 25 and works its way up to 40 per ounce. At 40 per ounce, yogurt has more calories than most ice cream. Those that contain 25 calories per ounce are about a third as fattening. That still makes them about as coloric as a bottle of beer.

When the toppings, such as hot fudge, granola or crumbled chocolate chip cookies, which have become the great rage with soft frozen yogurts, are added, the clorie count zooms.

The yogurt metamorphosis took place as it moved out of the natural food store into the ice cream parlor. And in a way, what has happened to yogurt in its reincarnated form as frozen yogurt is what happened to ice cream a long time ago. Once it was made of cream, sugar, eggs and fruits. It was mixed by hand by some patient mother or young child pressed into service, sitting on the veranda on a hot July day trying to keep cool. Those people wouldn't recognize most ice cream today, or know how to pronounce all the ingredients that go into it. They wouldn't like the taste either.

A refreshing and cool way to serve unfrozen yogurt is an Indian drink called Lassi.

LASSIE
(Serves 2)

1 cup plain yogurt
1 cup fresh fruit juice
2 bananas
¼ teaspoon cinnamon or nutmeg
Honey or sugar to taste
Ice

Put all ingredients in a blender and blend until smooth and ice is crushed. The more ice, the thinner the drink.

PINEAPPLE YOGURT SHAKE
(2 to 4 servings)

1 can (6 ounces) frozen orange juice concentrate
1 cup crushed pineapple
2 cups plain yogurt
2 eggs
1 cup instant nonfat dry milk
2 tablespoons honey

Place all ingredients in a blender and blend until smooth. Chill or serve over ice.

MIND YOUR BEANS

If you're one of those people who doesn't know beans about beans, you're part of the great silent majority. There's no real status derived from being a bean-buff, but mind your beans anyway.

The truth may be that very few people know enough to discuss the bean scene "in depth". Beans date back to prehistoric times — the first one, similar to today's lima beans, sprang up in Algeria. However, green and wax (yellow) beans are native to the American continents. They were a staple food of the Indians and early explorers brought them back to Europe.

Generally, fresh Canadian beans are available from early July to September. No strings attached here! In years gone by you may have heard the term "string beans", but, thanks to our agricultural wizards, it no longer fits. The modern name "snap beans" suits them best; you can actually hear a snap as the bean breaks. Snap beans are of two types, the bush and the vining or pole bean. Within each type there are green-podded and yellow-podded varieties. Some are round-podded, some oval and some flat.

Look for young, crisp, tender, fairly stright beans free from blemishes, of uniform size with well-formed seeds. A dull, lifeless or wilted appearance indicates that they have been held too long. Allow 1½ pounds for 6 servings. Store in a plastic bag in the refrigerator and use within 5 days. To prepare for cooking, freezing or canning, wash the beans well under running water. Remove ends, and leave whole, cut in 1-inch pieces or French by cutting lengthwise in strips.

If you have sufficient beans to freeze, blanch cut beans 3 minutes and whole beans, 4 minutes. Chill quickly, drain thoroughly and pack dry. To serve, boil green beans 5 to 7 minutes and wax beans 4 to 6 minutes.

Canning is another alternative. Cover beans with boiling water, cover, bring to boil and boil 3 minutes. Pack hot, add salt and cooking liquid. Leave ½ inch headspace in glass jars and ¼ inch in cans. Run a knife blade round the inside of each container to release air bubbles. Process in a pressure canner at 10 pounds pressure, allowing 30 minutes for small containers (pint jars or 19-ounce cans) and 35 minutes for medium containers (quart jars or 28-ounce cans). To serve, empty beans into a pan, cover and boil 10 minutes even before tasting to ensure safety. For more information on canning and freezing fresh Canadian beans, write to Information Division, Agriculture Canada, Ottawa, K1A 0C7, and ask for a free copy of the following publications: Freezing Foods and Canning Canadian Fruits and Vegetables.

Take advantage of summer produce by combining fresh beans with other vegetables, spices and herbs.

GREEN BEANS AND NOODLES

1 cup thinly sliced onion
2 tablespoons butter
1 pound green beans, cut in half lengthwise
3 cups diced, peeled tomatoes
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 cups cooked broad noodles (4 ounces uncooked)

Sauté onion in butter until transparent. Add beans, tomatoes, sugar, salt and pepper. Cook until beans are crisp-tender (about 30 minutes). Place noodles in serving dish and top with beans and tomatoes. 6 servings.

So you've ordered beautiful new carpet for your home. Did you remember to ask about having the door bottoms trimmed if the new carpeting and pad are too high? Door-trimming isn't always a part of the carpet installation cost, and if you can't trim the doors and don't make arrangements to have it done, you can end up with doors that won't do what doors are supposed to do. Who needs a door that won't open or that scrapes away at the carpet?

Better make the most of all limes you buy. Prices will be high this year because the lime harvest is the lowest in 10 years, according to farm supply experts. If it's a bit of lime juice you need, pierce the lime with a fork and squeeze. The tiny holes won't dry out the lime as quickly as would slicing it. Let any lime peel dry and grate it for flavoring cool drinks.

Buying your first bunch of fresh herbs won't be a disappointment when you know that you must use twice as much fresh herbs as dried herbs to get the flavoring you want in foods. Dry the leaves that you won't need right away so that you can have dried herbs for seasoning later. Herbs air-dry nicely.

Mothers shouldn't add nylon socks to the stock of clothing they're collecting for the kids' camping trip — not if they will spend some chilly nights in a sleeping bag. Nylon holds moisture next to the skin, which makes feet feel even colder. For warm toes, stick to cotton socks topped by woolen ones.

Almost any leftover cooked vegetable can be dropped into a freezer bag for a future stew or soup. But how about a quick salad? Chill the broccoli or green beans (even peas) then sprinkle the leftovers with a favorite salad dressing. A salad for one is never a waste.

Look in the yard goods department if you need an inexpensive mesh for camping. A yard or two of inexpensive nylon net can hold your just-washed pots, pans, dishes so they can air-dry from a tree limb. The net is strong enough to hold warm soft drinks in a cool stream — knot together the four corners, of course.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

At a bridge tournament, one of the directors was selling entries for the Open Pair Championship. At the head of the line was a gorilla with a $20 bill clutched in his paw. Although visibly disturbed, the director took the $20 bill, gave the gorilla an entry slip and an incorrect $5 in change (the price of the entry was $10).

As the gorilla headed towards his designated table, I tapped him on the shoulder and, trying to make conversation, stated politely:

"We don't get many gorillas playing bridge."

The gorilla turned towards me and responded sourly: "At $15 an entry, bud, you're not going to get very many." And he was right. We haven't seen either hide or hair of a gorilla since.

Which brings us to the subject of "monkeyshines" at the bridge table. In the deal that follows, North's bidding is not recommended, despite the excellent result he achieved.

With favorable vulnerability conditions, North embarked on a series of "monkeyshines," hoping to purchase the contract in clubs. His two-heart bid brought a vociferous "double" from East, as did his subsequent retreat to two spades. When North then bid two notrump, East doubled again.

North's redouble of two notrump requires an explanation. This bid could not possibly have been misinterpreted by South as a desire to play at that contract. If North had wanted to play it there, he would have passed East's double, since two notrump doubled and fulfilled would have been scored as a game. hence, it was an "SOS" bid, a plea for rescue.

South correctly bid three clubs. This was promptly doubled by West — an unwise decision. When it was all over, South had lost only two hearts and three diamonds, for a loss of 100 points. (West was finessed for the club king.) As is evident, East-West could have made a small slam.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 5569 for the game today. One 9, one 6, and two 5s. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots. For example, 95—6+5 is a solution for 94.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 151. I shall be glad to check solutions.

Death Sentence for Arabs Selling Land to Israelis

AMMAN (Reuter) — More than 20 Arabs on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the river Jordan are living under sentence of death.

They are liable to be hanged if they cross into East Jordan or if ever the West Bank is recovered.

The crime for which they were convicted in Jordan is selling land or real estate to the enemy. The law was enacted in 1973 after reports to Amman indicated people in the Jerusalem and Bethlehem areas were considering selling their property to Israelis.

Nearly all persons so far convicted are free because they live on the West Bank and the Jordanian government has no access to them.

The legislation, known as "the law for preventing the sale of property to the enemy," provides for confiscation of the property, considers sales null and void and imposes prison sentences on go-betweens in the transactions.

According to judicial sources here, only one man, from Bethleham, has actually been affected by the law. He has been given a 10-year prison sentence for an offence which he denies.

Under the law, offenders are tried by a three-man special court appointed by the Council of Ministers.

Toronto Invention Key to Entebbe Raid

TORONTO (CP) — Sid Hurwich says he has a secret weapon which scrambled Ugandan radar and allowed Israeli aircraft to land undetected during the raid on Entebbe — but he's not about to tell anyone how it works.

The self-taught electronics expert, a 63-year-old widower who lives in Toronto, was awarded an Israeli medal of honor for his device.

He said in a recent interview the device is not an invention, but simply "a different use for one of the oldest basic principles of electricity — and it sops bombs from going off."

It started as a device, apparently electro-magnetic, for helping banks prevent thefts of money bags.

In 1969, Hurwich invited two police inspectors to his house for a demonstration. When the battery-powered device was turned on, the inspectors could not lift any of the bags they had brought, Hurwich said.

Bill Bolton, one of the inspectors, said: 'Neither Dave (the other inspector) nor I could pull the triggers on our unloaded service revolvers. We couldn't even pick them up."

Twenty minutes after they had entered the room, Hurwich told them to look at their watches. They had all stopped.

The following year, Hurwich presented his device to Israel because he found it could save lives by stopping the timing mechanisms on bombs.

Israeli Brig-Gen. Dan Shomron, who led the raid on Entebbe, recently told a Toronto luncheon audience that his plane landed in the darkness in the cloak of a civilian plane's noise, but persons knowledgeable about radar took the statement with a large grain of salt.

"I had an idea the device was used at Entebbe," said Hurwich. "But when the general was here, I found out for sure that it was. It's flexible and has many uses."

Police Ignore Pleas

DETROIT (UPI) — Police who wrote up an accident last week failed to notice the driver had four bullet wounds. A woman officer refuses to respond to rape or child abuse calls because they bother her.

Incredible tales have been surfacing in Detroit, where police training practices and the abilities of the officers are coming under sharp fire.

Mayor Coleman Young insisted Monday the city's police hiring test is satisfactory, but he called for an investigation into recruitment and training.

In May, Young ordered the department to put 700 new officers on the street by midsummer, and ordered that the candidates be pushed through the police academy in eight weeks rather than the usual 12.

But state tests given recently indicate many of those 700 cannot read above grade school level.

Last week, a Detroit man crashed into a utility pole and died. The case was handled as an accident by the responding officers, until doctors noticed the man had been shot four times.

Officers had failed to search the car, supposedly a routine matter in accidents, and had not noticed the murder weapon — which was still in the car.

The police also were confronted by a man who said he witnessed the accident and turned over the victim's wallet. The officers failed to take his name, a fact which has so far stalled the murder investigation.

'Rights Before Sovereignty'

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (WP) — U.N. ambassador Andrew Young said Tuesday the U.S. obligation to help victims of human rights violations is so strong that, in some cases, it justifies the risk of interfering with another country's sovereignty.

Comparing people who have been deprived of their rights with victims of an earthquake, Young said: "In many respects, human rights assistance is like earthquake assistance. When the overwhelming human need cries out, national sovereignty becomes less important than the human need."

Young has made the Carter administration's controversial championing of human rights the dominant note of almost all his public utterances in the five days since he began a 10-nation tour of the Caribbean area.

His trip, intended to underscore the Carter administration's decision to give the Caribbean a new high priority of attention, has been overshadowed by two other developments in U.S.-Latin American relations: the visit of Sen. Frank Church (D — Idaho) to Cuba and the expectation of an imminent agreement between Washington and Panama on a new Panama Canal treaty.

However, that hasn't deterred Young from hammering repeatedly at his contention that concern for human rights continues to be the principal underpinning of the Carter administration's foreign policy in every area of the world.

Hughes Will Muddle Worsens

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — The knotty tangle over Howard Hughes' will — or lack of one — has worsened.

The judge who has presided over the Hughes "Mormon Will" case for the last 16 months, District Judge Keith Hayes, was disqualified Tuesday because he, himself, is a member of the Mormon church. The disqualification sets the Nevada legal action back to square one.

CANNIBALISM 'IN BAD TASTE'

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Times-Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Alfred Packer was judged to be "in bad taste" this past weekend by the people who run the U.S. department of agriculture cafeteria here.

They took down a plaque dedicated to his memory which was hanging over the cafeteria entrance. "Not very funny," said the general services administration.

Packer, a Colorado pioneer, was convicted more than a century ago of cannibalism after eating five gold prospectors who had hired him to guide them through the mountains.

Stan Weston, a department employee who hates the cafeteria food, put up the plaque as a gesture last Tuesday and Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland spoke at the ceremony, saying Packer "exemplifies the spirit and the fare of the cafeteria."

Weston is one of 200 members of the friends of Alfred Packer, who hold annual dinners where the standard fare is steak tactare and bloody marys.

The GSA didn't see the humor in it, and they removed the plaque, telling Weston it was in poor taste and, anyway, he needed a permit. Countered Weston: "It's a raw deal."

Firemen Watch Homes Burn Down

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — At least 11 families lost their houses or apartments Tuesday as three major fires spread uncontrolled while striking Dayton fire fighters watched from their picket lines.

A judge has ordered the more than 370 firemen to end their two-day strike, but the union was delaying a response.

Meanwhile the firemen, who want higher wages and a shorter work week, have said they will respond only in life-threatening situations in this city of 241,000. No injuries have been reported from the fires.

The 16 supervisors were on duty, but all they could do was try to co-ordinate with outside departments. When they received telephone calls, they would go to the fires and make sure nobody was in danger, but did not fight them.

Firemen from outside departments responding to two alarms said they abandonded attempts to put out the fires after they were threatened by the strikers.

Timothy Harker, president of Firefighters Local 136, acknowledged receiving a restraining order to end the strike, issued Monday by Common Pleas Court Judge William Wolff. But Harker said he would not order firefighters back to work until a meeting of the full membership. That, he said, might take at least two or three days.

City Manager James Alloway directed law director James Drake to ask Wolff to issue a finding of contempt against the union.

There were fears for a time that policemen would join the strike. But on Tuesday, only 19 of the 400 police officers called in sick, and officials said it was not enough to affect service.

In Terre Haute, Ind., a city of 76,000, 110 of the 130 firemen have been on strike since Sunday in a pay dispute. Fire stations are being staffed by command officers, probationary firemen and the non-strikers.

Hemisphere Trials Begin Today

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (CP) — The fifty-one athletes who are to represent Canada at the Western Hemisphere World Cup track and field trials, which start today held their final workout at Revolution Stadium.

The Western Hemisphere World Cup trials have brought together all the best athletes from the Americas except the United States. The U.S. will send a team of its own to the World Cup in Dusseldorf, West Germany, in September.

To qualify for the world Cup an athlete will have to win his or her event here. Except in the 4x100 and 4x400 relays where the five fastest sprinters from the 100 and 400 metre races will be selected.

Cuba, led by 400-metre world record holder and Montreal Olympic double gold medalist Alberto Juantoreni is expected to dominate the meet. Both Ron Wallingford and national team coach Gerard Mach, of Hamilton, think Canada will finish second.

"We could have had a slightly stronger team if a few members like Greg Joy (high jump), of Vancouver, had wanted to compete," said Mach. "Injuries have also hurt us as Phil Olsen (javelin) of Nanaimo, and Bishop Lolegiewicz (shot put and discus) of Montreal, are both recovering.

"As it is our best chances are still in the high jump and in the throwing events, as well as the relays where we could place several runners."

In the women's high jump Debbie Brill, of Aldergrove, back from a successful spring in Europe, is the favorite. Robert Forget, of Montreal, is expected to win the men's high jump.

Jane Haist of Toronto has a good chance to win the women's discus and in the men's discus Bories Chambul, of Toronto, has a slight edge over Cuba's Julian Morrisson, judging by recent performances.

Barring any injury Victoria's Joyce Yakubowich is a certainty to make the women's 400-metre relay and she could also win the individual event. Patty Loverock, of Vancouver, is in exactly the same position in the women's 100-metre race.

Slew, Forego, Minstrel To Run in International

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Seattle Slew, Forego, The Minstrel — three of the world's top thoroughbred horses — and J. O. Tobin have accepted invitations to run in the $200,000 Washington, D.C., International at Laurel Race Course on Nov. 5.

John D. Schapiro, president of Laurel, made the announcement of the first acceptees at a news conference.

Seattle Slew, winner of the Triple Crown, reeled off nine straight victories before finishing fourth in the Swaps Stakes at Hollywood Park July 3 in his last start. J. O. Tobin won the Swaps.

Mickey Taylor, one of the owners of Seattle Slew, said the colt would make two or three more starts before the International, but definitely would not race before Oct. 1.

Forego, a seven-year-old gelding, is a three-time horse of the year in the United States who has lost his last three starts this year.

The Minstrel, a Canadian-bred son of Northern Dancer, won the Epsom Derby, Irish Derby and the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Stakes this year. The Minstrel will represent Ireland.

Schapiro said he expected representatives from Japan, France and possibly the Soviet Union to run in the International, which was worth $150,000 last year.

The International is a 1½-mile grass race.

Hunters Take Title

Saanich E. J. Hunter captured the Vancouver Island Junior "B" Lacrosse League playoff title by defeating Victoria Strathcona Stingers 13-7 Tuesday at Pearkes Arena.

Saanich, which won the opening game of the best-of-three series 13-10, and Victoria will both represent the Island in the British Columbia championship tournament Aug. 20-21 at Pearkes.

Greg McGinnis, Wayne Reeve, Paul Sharples and Murray McLaren led Saanich with two goals each while Gerry Shelley and Mark Schoor scored twice each for Victoria.

Filly Tops Sales

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — A chestnut filly by Sir Ivor out of Double Damask sold for $152,000 to top the first night sales of the 57th Annual Yearling sales.

The filly was consigned by Malcolm Parrish with L. Clay Camp as agent. The Sir Ivor filly became the surprise first night leader after a filly by Secretariat had sold for $130,000 earlier. The Secretariat filly sold to John Jones as agent was the favorite to top the first session of the four-night yearling sales. There are seven Secretariat yearlings left to be sold.

A sum of $60,000 was paid for a filly by Toronto's E. P. Taylor, who is also the breeder of Nijinsky II, a son of Northern Dancer.

Blues Get Redmond

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues have acquired defenceman Dick Redmond from Chicago in a National Hockey League trade that sent right-winger Pierre Plante to the Black Hawks.

Redmond led all Chicago defencemen last season in scoring with 22 goals and 25 assists for 47 points. Last season Plante had 18 goals and 20 assists.

Doping No Longer Fashionable

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Doping among Olympic athletes is on the way out, an International Olympic Committee doping control chief said Tuesday.

Prof. Robert Dugal, head of the doping control section of the 1976 Montreal Games organizing committe, said psychomotor stimulants were "definitely on the decline" and that body-building anabolic steroids will soon "fall off in the same way."

But despite the decline, testing stations must still be kept up, said Dugal, acting head of research into medical science at the Canadian National Institute of Scientific Research.

Dugal said that of 275 tests for anabolic steroids carried out in Montreal, only eight positive results were reported to the IOC. And of 1,800 tests carried out as part of the testing of "traditional doping substances," only three samples proved positive.

SOME JOKE!

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Police officials said Tuesday they have dismissed as a practical joke a series of fires Monday lit in Curtis House at Memorial University, the dormitory that accommodates the Quebec delegation to the Games.

Deputy Chief Richard Roach said all of the fires were minor and were set in areas where they would cause little damage. He said there have been no further incidents at the dormitory since police began investigating the fires late Monday.

Four separate fires were set in waste containers in the building on Monday.

Rapid Progress for Vegetables

Warm weather fruiting vegetables are making rapid progress these days, and nights too, promising fine returns for whatever assistance gardeners have been giving.

Particularly prolific just now are young zucchini squash; tomatoes ripening on the plants are to be picked each day thus giving the fruits already set every chance to develop size and ripen within the next weeks.

Cucumbers are doing much the same as squash for those who grow this sometimes popular vegetable.

Assistance from gardeners consists of copious watering at the roots of these plants. If each was given a large hole layered with shredded newspaper well soaked and then the hole filled with soil from an old compost heap, these occasional soakings will last several days. The constant presence of moisture within the compost material makes it possible for the roots to take in the nutrients from the soil in the form of liquid.

No amount of fertilizer in any form is of use to plants if insufficient moisture is at root level.

Assisting in the use of soil nutrients are the broad spreading leaves of squash and the equally spreading though less broad leaves of tomatoes.

Plant leaves spread in sunlight are converters of nutrients into usable form. They have been called "Nature's factories." Apart from this important function, of equal importance is the role of sunshade to young fruits forming below.

Squash plants are native to warm parts of Mexico where young water-filled fruits need protection from fierce heat. On clear sunny days the same need exists here. Also as the season advances, when cool nights occur, leaves form a protective canopy.

Only as maturity of fruit progresses on varieties of squash being left to ripen for winter storage, will less leaf coverage be desirable. By that time you find leaves are shrinking, becoming drier, and finally shrivelling until the first frost signals the need to bring all squash indoors. Only pumpkins with their thicker skins are improved by the light frosts occurring here at the end of September into early October.

Tomatoes have less densely shading leaves. You notice they provide a dappled effect of alternate shade and sun moving across the fruits as the day progresses. This is ideal. We don't remove these leaves.

There have been summers when a piece of old bamboo blind erected on the southwest of each tomato plant was needed as protection from the greatest sun heat of the day. The fruits without the light shade suffered sunscald and failed to ripen evenly.

Particularly needing this care were tomato plants of English origin. Those of Ontario origin and others from the eastern United States are more heat tolerant. All need a full complement of leaves for total fulfillment of fruit potential.

In some climates leaf thinning may be a desirable practice but here our plants need their leaves to aid development of many and perfect fruits.

I'm Stumped

This home is still for sale but only because it's in a different location. The house is a superbly rejuvenated older 2-storey home with bs't. The owners have updated all the services, completely redone the interior, and turned this into a beautiful home. The patio garden area is private and pleasing. But it's not in a residential area and after many years of work and enjoyment the owner's want to move. So now this industrially zoned home would make an excellent offices or home and crafts shop; or maybe you want to live closer to town. Call for information on this home priced at $50,500.

I'M STUMPED

This home is still for sale but only because its in a different location. The house is a superbly rejuvenated older 2-storey home with bsmt. The owners have updated all the services, completely redone the interior and turned this into a beautiful home. The patio garden area is private and pleasing. But its not in a residential area and after many years of work and enjoyment the owners want to move. So now this industrially zoned home would make an excellent office or home and crafts shop; or maybe you want to live closer to town. Call for information on this home priced at $50,500.

Baseball Broadcast Tells Boy He'll Die

CHICAGO (UPI) — Scott Crull, a 12-year-old Chicago Cubs' fan who has been suffering from bone cancer for three years, watched his favorite team on television Monday night and learned he was going to die.

"It was a terrible misfortune that it got out on nationwide television," Scott's father, Dwight, said Tuesday night.

Scott and millions of other baseball fans watching the Cubs play the Pittsburgh Pirates on the nationally televised Game Of The Week got the word of his impending death from unwitting ABC announcer Keith Jackson.

It struck like a thunderbolt in the suburban Calumet City home of the Dwight Crulls as they, Scott and two of their other children watched the game.

The word about Scott came when Cubs' right fielder Bobby Murcer — Scott's favorite player — slammed the first of his two home runs for the evening.

Scott had talked to Murcer on the telephone earlier in the day and Murcer had promised he would try to hit a home run for him, his father said.

When Murcer delivered, a Cubs' official passed a note to Jackson in the broadcast booth. Jackson then told the national audience that the homer was hit for Scott Crull, a boy dying of cancer.

The fact that he was dying was news to Scott.

"We found out he had terminal cancer three years ago," his father said of Scott, who was under sedation Tuesday night. "You just don't tell something like this. If he doesn't ask you, you don't tell him."

Scott's doctor has told the family the boy has at best 1½ months to live, Dwight Crull said.

Jim Davidovich, the Cubs' statistician, set up the telephone interview between Murcer and Scott on instructions from the home office. A Crull family friend had informed the Cubs of Scott's plight.

After Murcer hit his home run, Davidovich passed the note on to Jackson giving him the background on the promise.

He said he did not expect the broadcaster to read Scott's name on the air.

"You've got to be a little discreet about it," he said. "I assumed they wouldn't read that. I feel just awful. You're doing something to help a kid and somehow it gets twisted up.

"You end up looking like a heel."

Crull said, "I'm not blaming anyone except the station. It should have gotten out a different way."

The father said Scott has been bedridden all summer and had religiously followed the Cubs' unexpected ascendency.

"It was wonderful entertainment for him," he said. "It was wonderful for him (Murcer) to call here. But this has been a bad thing for Scott.

"We've all taken it real hard."

Priest Among Hundreds Of 'Banned' S. Africans

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Rev. Smangaliso Patrick Mkatshwa dresses like a dandy, speaks like a Roman Catholic priest, which he is, and has just become a nonperson for the next five years.

A major and two captains of the security police approached him at a recent Catholic bishops' conference in Pretoria and handed him a document called a banning order which has forced him to become a recluse.

No one can say why.

As usual with banning orders, the police have no comment and, as the judiciary has no real part in the affair, there is no court record. Father Mkatshwa may know the reason for his penalty but the law says a banned person must not be quoted in the press.

What is known is that until 1982, the 38-year-old black priest faces a life of enormous loneliness which, for a forceful preacher and a gregarious, lifeloving man, will be a hard trial.

He will be under house arrest each day between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. and must report to his local police station every week. He will not be allowed any visitors except a doctor.

He may not meet more than one person at a time and he may not take part in political activities.

He must remain within the magisterial districts of Pretoria and the eastern part of Mabopane black township, where he is ordered to reside.

Hitherto, he had lived in a Roman Catholic house in Visagie Street, Pretoria—a good enough address and, ironically, one that had embarrassed Father Mkatshwa as he went about his work among blacks increasingly disillusioned both with the church and the white establishment in South Africa.

For three years, the priest had tried unsuccessfully to rent a house in Mabopane or any other of the black townships that ring Pretoria.

Time and again, his applications were turned down on the grounds that he was not the head of a family—a prime requisite for housing. As a Roman Catholic priest, of course, he is celibate and has no family.

Now his housing problem, at least, is solved. For the next five years he will live in a four-room house in Mabopane East Township.

He can still work for the bishop's conference, but under severe constraints that mean it will be strictly a desk job.

Until the ban Father Smangaliso, in his smart suits, bright shirts and dark glasses, had moved among the ranks of the South African students organization and the black people's convention, a leading black movement.

As the man in charge of the church's department of development, he had travelled widely, not only in South Africa but abroad.

Coincidence Chain Led Psychologist To Insanity Brink

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Stanford University psychologist says a bizarre chain of coincidence drove him to the edge of madness and a belief that he was cursed.

Dr. Philip Zimbardo told the annual meeting of the Canadian Psychological Association he came close to insanity after a series of fatal accidents to people associated with his scientiifc careef.

"The starting point of madness is the perception of a discontinuity, an anomaly, that something doesn't make sense," he said, adding that his own example refutes the notion that insanity always has physiological causes.

He termed his own experience "the killing-ground syndrome." The trouble began when he was a graduate student at Yale University and three of his advisers died in quick succession.

After Zimbardo became a professor, a student research assistant and his wife died in a car crash. Then a television technician was electrocuted while recording one of Zimbardo's experiments at a California prison.

Two years later an entire television production team died during taping of a series about a similar project.

"The whole plane—all the crew and the actors crashed into a mountain on a bright summer day for no known reason," he said.

Zimbardo hired his father as an assistant and he died, too.

"Then I transferred the royalty cheque for the work to my mother. She died three months later. That's the story to date.

"You reach a point where you say that there must be a correlation. The thing that was driving me crazy was that I was benefiting from the people who died, or their deaths. I stopped wanting students to work with me. I felt cursed."

Zimbardo said his recovery came when he discovered a colleague who also felt responsible for one of the deaths and thought that he too, carried the curse of several others.

He said the experience led to an interest in the origins of insanity.

"When a person has an experience which deeply affects his mental peace, the first reaction is to search the memory for a similar past experience, he said, adding that if that fails, the next step may be "an external search mission."

"If I can find three other people who act the way I do, then it's not madness, it's a social movement."

Zimbardo said that if a person can find no plausible explanation for abnormal experiences, then removal from society can be the final step toward madness.

"The best simple predictor I know is the degree to which someone is isolated from other people. He can't use social comparisons. He can't check the validity of his own experiences."

The people most likely to be judged mad without cause are those who have little power, Zimbardo said.

WHAT'S IN A PLACE NAME?

TORONTO (CP) — Winning topographical immortality is not as easy as it used to be.

The Ontario Geographic Names Board, which decides what goes on the maps of the province, from Punkeydoodles Corners to Greasy Foot Island, said naming a locality or a geographical feature after a living person is discouraged.

"You never know how a person is going to turn out, and once a name is on the map it is almost impossible to get it off," said Michael Smart, executive secretary of the board.

"Suppose we had named a mountain after Richard Nixon. We'd be pretty embarrassed about it. . . . If we wait until someone has gone to his maker, we stand less risk, but even that isn't a certainty. Look at Mackenzie King, for example. His name was impeccable, but now it has all sorts of associations."

Despite the discouragement, a few property owners, including one federal cabinet minister whom Smart would not identify, keep trying to get themselves on the map.

One man has been applying since 1972 and the board has put in many hours checking the claim and surveying area residents to see if the name is used locally. If the name catches on, he will likely win.

The board only deals with tiny, unincorporated communities like Punkeydoodles Corners, a hamlet of 14 residents near Kitchener, Ont.

Debbie Cunningham, board geographer, said a German pioneer innkeeper in the place used to sing his favorite song, Yankee Doodle, whenever he drank. It came out Punkeydoodle instead, and the name stuck.

Tradition counts heavily in formally confirming a name, and the older the tradition, the better. The names of pioneers are commonly used, so many applicants pretend they want to name something after their fathers or grandfathers. The board usually catches this subterfuge.

Getting murdered may also put your name on the map. Benwell Swamp near Woodstock, Ont., is named after Fred Benwell, whose body was found there in 1890.

The board is against commercial names, said Smart. "If someone wants to call a place Lockheed Point and the chairman of the company happens to live there—not a hope."

More than two million sites in Canada remain unnamed, including several mountain peaks in British Columbia being reserved for prime ministers.

"You can put up a sign on your property with your name on it," said Smart. "If the name catches on and gets used long enough, it could eventually get on the map. But I wouldn't advise you to hold your breath while you're waiting."

Permissiveness Tide Turning, Anti-Porn Leader Believes

LONDON (Reuter) — Mary Whitehouse, a schoolteacher who heads the anti-pornography campaign in Britain, says the tide of permissiveness may now be turning.

Often dubbed the keeper of Britain's moral conscience, Mrs. Whitehouse has roused fierce controversy for almost 15 years.

Now she is on the warpath again, with most of the old battle cries for moral rearmament and some new ones too. In a new book called Whatever Happened to Sex? she sets down her beliefs that sex has been cheapened in modern society but concludes that her campaign is at last getting somewhere.

The latest danger is that the young might now react against sex altogether, Mrs. Whitehouse said in an interview.

"And I'm decidedly neither anti-fun nor anti-sex."

Mrs. Whitehouse explained this as a motive prompting her to write the book.

"My own deepest fear is that the young, growing up as they are in a culture soaked in coarseness, erudity and cruelty may react against sex and therefore against life and the God who gave it. That we shall raise a generation which either grasps at sex as a physical lust or treats it simply as a passing fancy.

"The consequences of such a turning away from life are incalculable."

Mrs. Whitehouse sets the problem in a wide historical context, from the earliest stirrings of renaissance liberalism to present-day Western democracy and the future of humanity.

Her targets are not only the "sexperts, pornocrats and girlie magazine philosophers." She also aims stinging attacks at churchmen, teachers, parents, politicians and television bosses for their "abdication of the authority and responsibility of providing moral leadership."

Mrs. Whitehouse launched her public career in 1960 when she was appointed a senior schoolmistress and made responsible for sex education in the school.

Four years later she and a friend started what became known as the Clean Up TV Campaign and later on as the National Viewers andd Listeners Association.

The association now has 20,000 members. She has written hundreds of newspaper and magazine articles and lectured at practically every British university and several in the United States and Australia.

In Spain under Franco she was often quoted as a shining example of right thinking.

All this has tarred her with the brush of publicity-seeker, a charge she vigorously denies.

"My only motive is to fight for a situation where people can freely decide for themselves because they are presented with the whole picture. Otherwise, media bias feeds them half-truths."

Manipulation and exploitation are favorite Whitehouse words. She is convinced the media are guilty of both.

Her opponents regard this view as bigoted and puritanical and Mrs. Whitehouse herself as a threat to individual freedom.

Jack Dominian, a Roman Catholic doctor who has also written a book about changing the ethics of sex, argues: "The real corruption of our age has nothing to do with sexual pleasure but with disposable relationships which strangle the potential of love which needs continuity and reliability to flourish."

Mrs. Whitehouse's tentative optimism is not enough to let her ease up on her campaign.

She said, "We must be constantly on our guard. If we are not, there is nothing to stop, for example, the impending import of kiddie porn from the United States where children of three are used in sexual poses."

NO TROUBLE AND STRIFE

LONDON (CP) — Leslie Conn, a Mayfair nightclub owner, used an electronic ticker-tape-type signboard and a little Cockney rhyming slang to tell the world it was all over with Rosamund.

Every six minutes all night the travelling lights spelled out:

"Here's to Rosamund Turner, once my trouble and strife. Now we are separated, we lead a happier life—Loverboy Leslie Conn."

Said Rosamund: "I was flabbergasted but I don't mind. There was no anger when we split up."

As any Cockney will tell you, "trouble and strife—that's me wife."

The message cost Leslie about $100.

Today's Shepherd: Ball Cap, Blue Jeans, Striped Cane

BENEDICT, Md. (AP) He wears jeans and a red, white and blue baseball cap instead of the long, white cloak. He carries a striped cane rather than a staff. And most of his time is spent in the barnyard, not on a bucolic hillside, tending his flock.

But Gary Hornbaker is a shepherd, translated in today's language as a "livestock general manager."

"When you mention that you're a shepherd, people stereotype you as a biblical shepherd—the guy walking around with a cloak on, a staff in his hand and a lamb under his arm," said the 26-year-old animal husbandry graduate.

"People automatically ask, 'Do you just sit on a hill and watch sheep all day?'"

For Hornbaker, with four years on the job, being a shepherd involves more than keeping the animals together.

"Today, you have to be a nutritionist, a veterinarian, as well as a businessman," he said.

Just then a truckload of buyers rounded the bend and a bargaining session began. Hornbaker told two men he'd sell them the lambs they wanted for $45.

"Can't you give us a break?" one of them said. "It's for a charity barbecue. I bought them from you two years ago and they were cheaper. Besides, we have friends who want to buy from you."

They finally settled on a price and Hornbaker came away laughing. "That's part of being a shepherd," he said.

Despite the modern attire, Hornbaker resembles the biblical shepherds who used to graze their sheep for five months at a time. He sports a bushy red beard on his tanned, slightly weathered face.

Hornbaker does most of his herding with the help of border collies, which he raises and trains. The dogs' natural instinct is to run sheep.

Working with one of his dogs, Hornbaker gathers in about 400 sheep. Bo slowly crawled through the weedy grass, following his master's cues of "come up . . . to the right . . . all the way around." When he got too far off to be heard, Hornbaker directed the dog with waves of his cane.

Hornbaker said he became a shepherd because "I like to work with livestock and don't want to be confined behind a desk."

People in the city, he said, "get in tight places, get tensed up and always worry about money."

Money is a problem with shepherds, too, with an annual wage he put on the level of teachers' pay. He tells people, though, that the cash is "enough to buy a pouch of tobacco."

He is exposed to the weather year-round and must put in 10-hour days, seven days a week, during the winter.

"The winter is the most important time to be with the sheep when they're lambing," he said. "These little guys depend on you and you can't let them down."

After the lambs are born, they are kept on feed until they go to slaughter. That brings some questions at home.

"My wife can't understand how I can help the sheep give birth to the lambs and then turn around and cut their throats. But I tell her it's part of the business."

PPCLI SHARPSHOOTERS WIN RIFLE CONTEST

Nine sharpshooters from the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patrica's Canadian Light Infantry, won top honors in rifle shooting on the weekend.

The Work Point-based team captured the Letson Trophy for the best unit championship rifle team at the 95th annual Dominion of Canada Rifle Association and Regular and Reserve Force Service rifle matches held at the Connaught Ranges near Ottawa.

The win earns them the right to be on the 12-strong Canadian armed forces team that will compete at Bisley in Britain in 1978.

Double honors went to Sgt. Ed Luscombe. He won both the coveted Queen's Medal and the Queen's Jubilee Goblet for top marksman for the regular forces.

PRISONERS FASTING

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 1,000 maximum security prisoners in federal penitentiaries from Dorchester, N.B. to the B.C. Penitentiary are taking part in a hunger strike today protesting government delays in implementing recommendations contained in a report on prison reform.

Solicitor-General Francis Fox, who says he needs more time to study the report, said the hunger strike will have no impact on his actions.

FOR FAMILY TRANSPORTATION that's inexpensive and non-polluting it would be hard to beat the three-wheeler propelled by Mrs. Bruce Lowden, of 2331 Cranmore. Snugly strapped in place in the shopping basket up front is 12-week-old Michael, while big brother Scott, 5, helps with the steering and Christopher, 4, brings up the rear. Flights Return Slowly

Times News Services

Resumption of air service in Canada was hindered today as air traffic controllers were slow to return to work at Toronto International Airport.

F. E. Dorey, regional superintendent for the ministry of transport, said in an interview today that airports across the country were operational and ready to resume service but that an insufficient number of controllers had returned to work at Toronto.

"The controllers are dragging in slowly but we are having difficulty in reaching them," he said.

Dorey said legislation passed by the Commons early this morning stipulated that the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association was obligated to call its members and tell them to go back to work.

An association official in Toronto said in an interview: "We are not telling our men not to return to work. It is up to the ministry to inform them that they should go back."

Michael de Wilde, public relations spokesman for Air Canada, said the Toronto air traffic control centre has jurisdiction over air traffic at all Ontario airports except for Thunder Bay and Ottawa. It controls all flights passing over the province.

The lateness in opening Toronto was effectively delaying the opening of other airports, he said.

An Air Canada spokesman in Montreal said staff and planes were ready to fly early this morning but clearance from the ministry of transport to resume flights was delayed because controllers were not back to work at Toronto.

Don Redden, steward of the Toronto branch of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, said that the union was not staging a slowdown in resumption of operations.

"He said it was the responsibility of the ministry of transport to advise individual controllers when their shifts were to begin.

"Our job is to advise members that the strike is over, but not when to return to work," he said. "We could not possibly know when they should return to work."

TENSE ULSTER VISIT

Bombings, Riots Welcome Queen

Times News Services

BELFAST — Queen Elizabeth, guarded by more than 32,000 armed men, stepped on Northern Ireland soil today and touched off bombings and protest riots by supporters of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, who vowed to make it "a day to remember."

Several thousand stone and bottle-throwing Roman Catholics battled with police and riot troops in downtown Belfast an hour after one bomb, blamed on the Protestant Ulster Defence Association, went off in the area, injuring six persons.

Police said another Catholic mob rampaged through an area a mile north of the city centre, overturning automobiles and battling with security forces.

"We don't want your goddamn queen," they chanted.

Earlier, a time bomb planted in a car exploded at Crossmaglen, 50 miles from Belfast, causing property damage in the town centre.

Meantime the Queen, dressed in emerald green with matching hat, strolled smiling amid 2,500 cheering and flower-waving subjects on the lawns of heavily-guarded Hillsborough Castle, eight miles from the Belfast riots.

The 51-year-old monarch looked tired and tense from her gruelling schedule of Silver Jubilee visits to all parts of the United Kingdom, but her smile broke through when groups of children rushed forward to present her with bunches of flowers. One small boy gave her a brown pot.

The Belfast blast was near the rallying point for about 3,000 Republican marchers who were heading toward it behind a banner proclaiming the royal visitor "Queen of Death."

Another banner, referring to the eight years of violence in the six counties, said "1969-77, 1,800 dead."

The illegal march was organized by the Provisional Sinn Fein, political wing of the Provisional Irish Republican Army, as a demonstration of "abhorrence and resentment" against the Queen's visit.

The visit is the Queen's first to Ulster since 1966 — three years before British troops were ordered into the province, torn by sectarian strife between majority Protestants loyal to the crown and minority Roman Catholics seeking union with the Irish Republic.

Clark Starts Legal Action Against Gov't

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Joe Clark announced Tuesday night that he has initiated steps to take the federal government to court to challenge the legalities of its participation in an international uranium price-fixing cartel.

Prime Minister Trudeau said earlier in the Commons he has asked advisers to review a 1976 cabinet order that the opposition feels restricts open debate — even the seeking of legal advice — on the operations of the cartel.

Clark issued a statement saying the Progressive Conservative party has retained Toronto lawyer John Sopinka as counsel "in respect of possible legal action arising from the government's involvement in the international uranium cartel."

The Conservatives, who have obtained documents from a U.S. court case about the cartel, say the operation may have violated Canadian anti-combines law and damaged Canadians because of higher prices for uranium.

MERCURY SOARS TO 3-YEAR HIGH

If you got a little hot around the collar Tuesday there was good reason — it was Victoria's hottest day in nearly three years.

The temperature tipped the scale at 29.3 degrees Celsius — 84.7 degrees Fahrenheit — at the airport and it was one degree cooler at Gonzales.

The last time it was hotter was on Aug. 28, 1974, when the temperature hit 32.1 degrees.

But Tuesday's scorcher was still no record. The warmest Aug. 9 was 34.4 degrees in 1960.

A spokesman for the Victoria weather office said today the five-day outlook calls for more sunny, warm weather with highs of 25 to 30 degrees and lows of 10 to 12 degrees.

No rain is in sight. The last measureable rainfall was July 16 when there were 2.6 millimeters.

Several parks in Greater Victoria have been closed and a bonfire scheduled for Friday's Silver Jubilee celebrations has been cancelled in Beacon Hill Park due to the extremely dry conditions.

Victoria city dropped its plan for a bonfire after a grass fire set to prepare the site for the bonfire almost went out of control. All other Silver Jubileee festivities will take place as planned.

The Capital Region District has closed North Hill Park, self, Mill Hill Park and East Sooke Park except for the beach self, Mill Hill Park and EST Sooke Park txcept for the beach area.

Victoria has closed Thetis Lake Park trails, leaving only the parking lot and main beach area opened to the public. Trails in Mount Douglas Park are also closed but all picnic areas near the beach are open.

Provincial parks remain open but a spokesman for the parks branch said fires are allowed only in designated areas with pits.

Saanich has also closed public access to several areas because of the high fire hazard. Affected areas include wooded areas of Ten Mile Point, a large portion of the Prospect Lake area and an area near Camosun College.

Delay 'Would Be Disastrous' In Rebuilding Razed Dock

City and provincial politicians were told today Victoria can rebuild its port facilities on the ashes of Monday night's massive fire at Ogden Point, but if any time is lost it will be a port only for "some oranges at Christmas time — and that would be disastrous."

The comment came from Hershell Smith, principal of Westcan Terminals, the firm of wharfingers which collected wharf revenue for Canadian National Railways in the large warehouse building destroyed in the fire.

At a special meeting called by Victoria Mayor Mike Young, Smith stressed the need for quick, firm decisions in redeveloping the dock area without time-wasting political hassles a on who does what and for how much.

He said it's essential that the companies using the Ogden Point facilities for shipment of pulp — a trade with present profits of about $500,000 a year and potential for 400,000 tons annually — be given an early indication of when they might resume usage.

Otherwise, he warned, the trade will go elsewhere, the area's economy would suffer even further and the jobs of longshoremen with a payroll of $3 million a year would be lost.

Smith said the razed warehouse had a total area of 140,000 square feet and a replacement of 200,000 square feet would cost about $2 million.

If speedy action is taken the structure could be completed by the end of November, he said.

Smith suggested the CNR be asked immediately if it intends replacing the warehouse. If not, there should be representations to the federal ministry of transport for the formation of a Victoria harbor commission similar to those in Port Alberni, Nanaimo and elsewhere.

Such a commission would be able to seek federal grants to finance rebuilding, and also apply for long-term capital loans for port development. Amounts as high as $30 mil-

JULY FERRY TRAFFIC UP 21% OVER 1976

July vehicle traffic on B.C. Ferries at two main crossings increased an average 21 per cent over last year, according to statistics released Tuesday.

The Tsawwassen to Swartz Bay run was up 23 per cent while the return crossing jumped 21 per cent.

Passenger traffic on the Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay route rose 18 per cent and the return trip 16 per cent.

Horsehoe Bay to Departure Bay traffic went up 20 per cent in both directions, while passenger traffic increased 18 per cent.

The statistics didn't provide comparisons with 1975 figures.

Ferry faes were doubled last year and then cut back 20 per cent early this year when vehicle and passenger traffic dropped drastically.

NEW YORK — Owners of the six World Hockey Association teams who Tuesday had their applications for entry into the National Hockey League rejected by the NHL board of governors were still in a state of shock today.

"They will regret this decision," said Harold Baldwin of the New England Whalers. "The decision was made by a small group of emotional men, not in the best interests of hockey. We're not going out of business. Now maybe we'll concentrate on getting aggresive."

"We thought we were doing the best thing for hockey," said Bill DeWitt Jr. of the Cincinnati Stingers. "Obviously, the NHL didn't.

Ed Snider, president of the Philadelphia Flyers of the NHL and one of the prime backers of an association with the WHA, said: "naturally I'm disappointed; I don't know what the vote was. It was a secret ballot."

It is believed seven NHL governors were against the merger.

Bob Graham, chairman of the board of the Winnipeg Jets, said: "We understand the governors didn't even vote on our applications. Naturally we are shocked. It was unexpected."

Some NHL governors feel the WHA could take legal action against them. However, the WHA officials would not say what they might do. (See story on page 16).

Another Secret Document On Kerster Bared by NDP

WEATHER
Tonight: Clear
Thursday: Sunny

The New Democratic Party Tuesday hit the Social Credit government with yet another secret document it claims bolsters opposition charges that MLA George Kerster (SC-Coquitlam) received preferential treatment from the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

The latest — revealed to the legislature's public accounts committee by Gary Lauk (NDP-Vancouver Centre) — is a memo written March 22, 1977, by Murray Rogan, manager for ICBC public inquiries, to Norman Bortnick, ICBC general manager.

The document is stamped confidential, and as far as Bortnick and Rogan know, the only copies are the original, Rogan's file copy and a copy forwarded to T. E. Holmes of the claims department. Bortnick said all copies would be kept in locked files.

The memo notes that the corporation has been asked to provide a written statement concerning the overdue fleet account of Surrey Dodge, Kerster's old firm.

In it, Rogan writes: "In view of the sensitive nature of previous operational matters involving Mr. Kerster, I would appreciate being advised as to how you wish the matter to be handled."

The memo also notes that the account is "shortly to receive legal attention due to the outstanding amount," and concludes: "I see no reason why this account should be treated differently, but in view of other altercations with Mr. Kerster, perhaps you have other thoughts."

Under tough questioning Rogan said he had made a "poor choice of words," and added that Kerster had been treated the same as any other citizen.

Bortnick explained the reference to legal action, noting that all overdue accounts are eventually referred to the ICBC legal department for action.

Rogan insisted that he felt that the account should not be handled any differently than all the others.

"It was just a figure of speech, and certainly did not imply that special treatment had been requested," he said.

To questions by Kerster, he

Ottawa Deficit Soars

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's budgetary deficit for the 1976-77 fiscal year which ended last March 31, totalled $6.301 billion, a growth of more than 50 per cent from the previous year, preliminary estimates released Tuesday by the finance department show.

The deficit was accounted for by spending of $38.941 billion and revenues of $32.640 billion. In the previous fiscal year, the deficit was $4.022 billion.

Financial requirements of the government, excluding foreign exchange transactions, totalled $5.394 billion, compared with estimated requirements of $5.350 billion in the March 31 budget.

The government figures showed the largest single component of revenues was personal income tax, which totalled $14.620 billion. Corporation income tax totalled $5.377 billion, sales tax revenue was $3.929 billion and customs import duties were valued at $2.097 billion.

Non-tax revenues, including such income as return on government investments, Bank of Canada income and post office revenues totalled $3.485 billion.

Major expenditures by the government in the 1976-77 fiscal year included $4.673 billion in payments on the government debt; $3.113 billion in fiscal transfer payments to the provinces; $4.437 billion in old-age security; $1.979 billion in family allowances.

The Canadian dollar, meanwhile, continued to drift downward in early trading on New York money markets today.

At noon, it was valued at 92⅝ U.S. cents, fractionally below the level it closed at Tuesday.

At one point, the Canadian dollar went as low as 92.67 U.S. cents, its lowest level since November 1969.

All-Out Effort to Save Dying Whale

Bob Wright of Sealand has been granted an emergency permit by the federal government to capture and treat a dying baby killer whale at Menzies Bay, 15 miles north of Campbell River.

Wright and a team of marine biologists were at the site Tuesday night enclosing the whale within a long net and trying to get it to eat.

The whale is believed to be about one year old. Normally baby whales take milk from their mother until they are 18 months old.

Wright is trying to get the whale to eat fish on a regular basis to build up its strength. If the whale becomes strong enough, it would be taken to Sealand for treatment.

Bern Hawley of the department of fisheries in Vancouver issued the permit Tuesday at the instructions of Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc.

"This is an emergency situation," Hawley said. "We understand the whale may die within a few weeks unless some action is taken."

Permits are no longer granted to capture killer whales except in emergency or special circumstances.

Dr. Michael Bigg of the fisheries biological station in Nanaimo has maintained a close watch on the whale since a resident of Menzies Bay reported it to him.

The whale is swimming in about 10 feet of water and not moving far.

At the instructions of Bigg, the resident, tried to feed the whale on the weekend and with some success.

"He goes out in a rowboat and taps against the side of the boat," Bigg said.

"When the whale hears the sound it swims over and eats some of the fish. This is the first recorded time anyone has fed a killer whale in the wild. This is very unusual."

Bigg said it appears the baby has become separated from its mother and is not certain how to survive on its own.

"This is an orphan whale and it is starving to death. Only a very lucky chance will save it."

Bigg said the whale is covered with sores, gashes and brown algae.

The algae growth indicates the whale is lying for extended periods in shallow water almost motionless, which is very unusual whale behavior but could be the result of being weak from hunger.

It's Time to Zap the Speed Freaks at Shawnigan

max low

Dale Carnegie mightn't be too happy with the idea but I'm thinking of writing a book and calling it "How to Lose Friends and Influence People."

My column on a brief trip to England caused enough controversy; but now I'm going to stick my neck out and make a few enemies of friends and neighbors by saying I favor a powerboat ban on Shawnigan Lake.

The once-tranquil little piece of water 20 miles from Victoria has long been a haven for city folk eager to escape that one plague of the metropolis: NOISE. They came to fish quietly, to glide silently by in canoes or just to relax in the sun. They sought and found that very thing that makes Canada's lakes so special — peace.

But no longer is there a haven at Shawnigan. So many city folk now flock to the lake and bring their noise with them. On every summer weekend — and often on weekdays, too — the speed freaks are out in force, towing skiers in all directions from dawn until well into darkness, or causing havoc by simply roaring up and down the length of the waterway for kicks.

The speed merchants have taken over. You risk your life going too far from the shore in a canoe; sailboats haven't a hope in hell of avoiding them; and a swimmer hasn't a chance of being seen bobbing about in the water while these boats move so incredibly fast and their drivers (many of them too young to be allowed to drive a car on our roads) often spend more time peering over their shoulders watching the skiers behind.

Often it isn't the residents of the lake who are to blame. Some have been there many years, are good skiers and know boats and how to treat them. But, with the restrictions being placed on lakes nearer Victoria, more and more weekenders are hauling their boats over the Malahat. They come and go and don't really have to respect what they find or leeave.

Ultimately, you pay the price for being a quiet person. Many are forced away from the place they love on weekends — to find a little peace. That's ironic enough, but I know people who won't even let their children swim in the lake because of the danger.

It's been getting worse each summer in recent years but the problem has been highlighted in the warm spell we've been enjoying. Complaints have been pouring in to Dick Stephenson, regional director for Shawnigan.

"Last week alone I had 21 calls complaining about boats on the lake," he told me.

Many complain, to, to the RCMP, who patrol the lake regularly during the summer and check up on troublemakers. The other night, the RCMP boat stopped at our float and the driver said he was investigating a report that people were doing some night skiing, which is illegal. And that was after 11 p.m.!

Stephenson, a keen sailor, said ideally he favors an eventual ban on motor boats.

"But at this point, I believe Shawnigan has to be a multi-purpose lake," he added. "The problem of noise pollution can be boiled down to about six large boats and they are a damned nuisance!"

Stephenson favors keeping the lake open to al kinds of boats for the time being but limiting the number of places where weekenders can go and put their boats in. And he goes along with the recommendations of a special planning committee for the area, which is suggesting that power boats be phased out gradually on Shawnigan Lake over the next 10 years.

Two public meetings will be held soon — on the Saturday before the Labor Day weekend and the Saturday after — at the Shawnigan Community Hall to discuss these and other recommendations.

After these meetings, bill as "open houses on the community plan," the committee will prepare a new plan for the area. It's expected to be ready by December.

"Our proposal is that motor boats be phased out over 10 years down to a 5 mph limit, ideally with quiet electric motors being allowed so that elderly people can still get around the lake," said Howard Dixon, chairman of the advisory planning commission for Shawnigan Lake.

Even that isn't good enough for Joan Wachtin, who has drawn up a petition to have motor boats banned now Citing the danger and the detrimental effect of the drinking water by petroleum-powered boats (most people draw their drinking water straight from the lake), Joan has more than 100 signatures already on her petition, which she is sending to Environment Minister Jim Nielsen.

While there is still some doubt clouding the question of water pollution, there appears to be little to argue with on the danger score as last weekend's boating accident on Elk Lake showed.

Two canoes were swamped by a boat towing a skier and a man almost drowned.

And there's the noise, said Dixon, who admits that the recommendations are aimed at getting fast boats and skiers off the lake. Where will they go?

"They can ski just as easily in the ocean," he said.

But Stephenson didn't agree.

"Debris and things like floating deadheads make it dangerous to ski in the sea, and do we have a right to deprive these people of the use of the lake?" he asked.

Dixon believes they do and he feels, in fact, that's what most of the people want.

"It used to be that more people wanted skiing than didn't," he explained. "But we sense that the mood of the people is changing."

There is no easy answer, but Dixon suggests we look at the rest of Canada for a lead. To places like Quebec, where he said they've banned motor boats on all lakes north of Montreal and where even the use of chain saws is limited to certain hours on lakeside properties.

Being basically a quiet person, one who would rather push a hand mower over an acre than put up with the clatter of a motor, I'm with Dixon when he says:

"Surely, it's a more fundamental right to have the peaceful use of nature than it is to be bombarded."

Water Woes Ease a Bit On Peninsula

Saanich Peninsula homeowners have taken the pressure off themselves — somewhat — by voluntarily cutting their water use.

Jim Cumming, chairman of the Saanich Peninsula Water Commission, said today the problem isn't "quite as desperate" as it was last week when residents were warned they faced cut-off supplies if they didn't conserve.

"I think our warnings have had some effect. People are responding," he said.

Cumming said, however, there can be no relaxation in self-imposed restrictions.

"It's still touch and go. People have to learn to help as much as they can."

By "helping," he means no lawn sprinkling, no washing cars or using water unnecessarily.

"If people would turn on the water only when they absolutely needed it and turned it off when they didn't, the problem would be solved," he said.

Michael Williams, senior design engineer with the Capital Region District, said current consumption, averaging about 2.5 million gallons a day for the three municipalities of Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney is about one million gallons less than it would normally be without restrictions.

"We're just hanging on. It's a critical problem, there's only so much water," he said.

Williams said if the residents fail to respond to the appeal for conservation, the water may have to be cut off for a certain number of hours a day in each municipality.

"We wouldnt want it to come to that but if it does and it's a matter simply of supply, then the warnings of shut-offs to the residents would be very short in time."

Smoke Detectors Ruled Safe

Ald. John Mika said Tuesday a report from the National Fire Protection Association disproves fears that smoke detectors in homes present a radiation hazard.

The report states residents are exposed to more radiation daily from the sun and watching television.

The report says a person within 10 inches of a smoke detector for eight hours a day during a period of 10 days would not be exposed to as much radiation as on a single flight across the United States.

Saanich's fire department sells smoke detectors at cost to residents. Mika said the department will continue to monitor the situation.

SAANICH OPPOSITION EXPECTED

Elk Lake Ski Ban Proposed

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

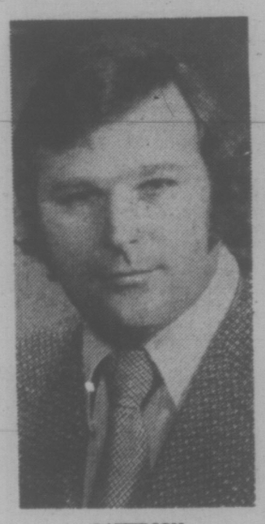
A ban on water skiing and use of aircraft on Elk Lake was recommended Tuesday by the Capital Regional Board's parks committee, but the motion is likely to be opposed by at least three Saanich regional directors when it comes up for board approval in two weeks.

And even if the board endorses the committee recommendation it wouldn't be a simple matter of enforcing the ban by erecting signs, because there would also have to be approval from the two senior levels of government.

Larry Slaght, regional manager for the federal ministry of transport, said today the federal government is responsible for all navigable waters and there is an established procedure for imposing restrictions on certain types of uses.

If the regional board wanted to prohibit water skiing and aircraft it would have to submit the resolution to the provincial ministry of recreation and conservation for endorsement before the request is conveyed to the federal ministry of transport, he said.

The committee recommendation Tuesday was carried by a three-to-one vote, with only Central Saanich Ald. Dave Hill opposed. Voting in favor of the proposed ban were directors Ron McKenzie (Victoria), Howard Drummond (Colwood) and Pat Massy (View Royal).



PATERSON
. . . he's against it

The discussion was prompted by a letter from water skiing enthusiast Alec Loiselle, 1228 Juno, who had made various proposals for ensuring safer use of the lake by water skiers.

Loiselle, who was at the meeting, said later the committee's attitude "reminded me of the days when the horseless carriage arrived on the scene and the authorities said they're causing chaos, let's get 'em off the streets."

He said it was obvious that the regional directors who voted for the ban proposal have closed minds when it comes to any form of leisure activity involving power.

Cass Schaefer, secretary of the Victoria Aqua-Ski Club, expressed concern about the committee recommendation, but said she suspected this kind of action once the regional board assumed responsibility for Elk-Beaver Lake.

She said the club is based on Shawnigan Lake where "right now they are trying to do the same thing to us." If Elk Lake is also closed to skiers there will be nowhere else for them to go on southern Vancouver Island.

Saanich Ald. Dave Paterson, chairman of the municipality's parks committee, said he would urge the Saanich representatives on the regional board to vote against the committee's recommendation.

"I am very distressed to hear this," said Paterson, adding that he believes water skiing can be compatible with swimming and other lake uses.

In any case, he said, he doubts whether the closure could be enforced because the lake comes under the navigable waterway category and is therefore subject to federal jurisdiction.

50-Pointers Irk Saanich

Saanich aldermen want the provincial government to start leaning heavier on bad drivers.

Ald. Ian Cass, chairman of council's legislative committee, said Tuesday that Chief Bob Peterson already has discussed the problem with superintendent of motor-vehicles R. G. Whitlock.

The committee will recommend Saanich write to Whitlock. The acetion is expected to be endorsed by council.

"There is evidence in our files that there are drivers in the community with an excess of 50 points who have had two, three and four suspensions," Cass said. "There are some with 10, 12 or 14 traffic violations and convictions that have still been able to re-obtain driving licenses in what appears to be quite a modest time."

The committee will recommend that repeaters not be given back their licences for at least four to six months.

Ald. John Mika said Whitlock's actions are dictated by provincial legislation and that political action is necessary to amend that legislation.

"This is an area problem. A bad driver living in Esquimalt can easily drive on Saanich streets," he said.

"There were 10,000 drivers in B.C. with 40 points or more two or three years ago. I think people of that description should wait a dozen years if necessary."

Whitlock said his department is already doing what the Saanich aldermen want, suspending bad drivers for between four to six months and often longer. A suspension, he said, could last for as long as three years.

He agreed that Peterson had spoken to him on the problem but had discussed only one particular case which was already under review by the motor-vehicles branch.

Whitlock said his department is dependent on what local police agencies do.

Residents Help Emily Carr Park

Broadmead Farms Ltd. has enlisted the support of Saanich Municipality and Broadmead residents in developing recreation facilities and pathways in Emily Carr Park at Royal Oak.

Broadmead director Gordon Rolston said today the project, on which three Broadmead employees are working, will cost his company "quite a few thousand dollars".

Saanich's parks and recreation committee Tuesday voted to recommend that $1,500 from the municipality's contingency fund be used on the project.

Rolston said in addition to building bridges and pathways in the two-acre park, there will be adventure playgrounds, fitness activity area and other features.

He said his company has met with Broadmead residents who will donate native plants, rose bushes and give other assistance.

Yarrows to Need 150 More Workers

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

They're singing Happy Days are Here Again at the Yarrows shipyard as the outlook just keeps improving.

Manpower has grown from a 1976 low of 92 to a level of 550 and about 150 additional employees will be needed starting in October, which will push the total over 700 before year's end.

And 1978 should be even better.

"It looks like we will need 800 employees during most of 1978," Yarrows acting manager George Forbes said today.

"We are pleased in many ways because we feel the shipyard operates at peak efficiency with about 800 workers. We have had as many as 1,200 and as few as 92 since the (Second World) war but 800 is about right."

Meanwhile, the jobs just keep coming in, a dramatic reversal from February when employment fell to 92 and there was nothing in sight but layoffs.

Things turned around with the awarding of a $5 million contract to refit the Provider.

This was followed by a $14.1 million contract to construct a self-propelled log carrier for MacMillan Bloedel.

Ship repair work has also been brisk, including a major contract on a Korean vessel the Yon Eun. While the repair job will employ 120 men for only three weeks there will be advance work on the log carrier to keep them busy after the Yon Eun sets sail.

Steel cutting for the MacMillan Bloedel vessel will begin in October and about 150 people will be hired over a period of weeks starting at ing to the West Coast."

The project is due to be completed by September, 1978. The Provider is scheduled for delivery Nov. 10 of this year.

Meanwhile, the company is optimistic that several other shipbuilding orders are just around the corner.

"We cannot make any announcements at this time because it would be premature but we are very hopeful about several new projects," Forbes said.

About half of them are government and the rest are private enterprise.

Ottawa has been studying several projects for about two years and a decision should be forthcoming within six months, Forbes said.

"If the projects are approved we have been told that some of the work will be coming to the west coast."

Victoria and Vancouver are strategically located to construct vessels for use in northern waters.

In addition, more self-propelled log-carriers will be needed by the forest industry. Orders for these are expected, but not before the present MacMillan Bloedel vessel is completed in 1978.

"This is a feast or famine sort of business and we have had some difficult years. But right now it looks very promising," Forbes said.

"I am told there is no longer any unemployment among welders in Victoria. That is our main problem at the moment. We could use more welders than we have."
